Expanding Cosmotheist Books

Dr. Thomas Dalton, PhD, is one of few courageous authors writing today about Jews, their Holocaust©, the splendid virtues of National Socialism and the lack of virtues of Christianity — four taboo subjects on which he and the National Alliance are in very substantial agreement. Cosmotheist Books has added eight of his books to its online inventory in the past two months and is adding four more of his titles this month. These latest four include his new complete, unabridged, and highly readable American English translation of Volumes I and II of Adolf Hitler's Mein Kampf in two books totaling over 1,300 pages. These are in dual German-English text (German on left-facing pages, English on the right). This is the first such translation since the 1940s, and far surpasses all existing versions. These are $35 each, or both together for $65. Dalton's The Holocaust: an Introduction which explores the evidence, or lack thereof, of the supposed "greatest crime of the 20th century" is also now in stock, as is his Eternal Strangers: Critical Views of Jews and Judaism through the Ages that addresses the Jewish problem, looking at history to understand why Jews have been disliked, loathed, and hated by non-Jews for centuries.

Other titles added this month are two more Penguin Classic book editions by Frederick Nietzsche: Ecce

Homo, and Twilight of Idols and Anti-Christ. Also Hampton Sides' Ghost Soldiers: The Epic Account of World War II's Greatest Rescue Mission, about the amazingly daring raid to rescue 513 POWs from a hellish Japanese prison camp behind enemy lines in the Philippines in January 1945. The exquisite, large format hardback edition of Ray and Josephine Cowdery's The New German Reichchancellery in Berlin 1938-1945 that includes numerous full-page color plates. Thomas Paine's unabridged Common Sense, the 1776 landmark document that had enormous influence with American colonists to mount the necessary revolution against what had become a tyrannical British government. Also added is Tom Wolfe's exposé of the fraud of "modern art," The Painted Word, with a very memorable painting by Norman Rockwell on its cover. Find our kind of review of this book, here: <https://nationalvanguard.org/2015/02/berg-berg-and-berg/> The Painted Word was the very first book purchased by Chairman Williams (a representational artist himself) from Dr. Pierce's National Vanguard Books in the late 1980s — and it was read and treasured by him, and lent many times to others by him over the years.

All of these titles, and others, are highlighted at Cosmotheist Books online this month: <https://cosmotheistchurch.org/product-category/books/latest-books/>

We are constantly upgrading our online bookstore now, and as of this writing customers can once again use their credit cards to make purchases.

Correspondence

Chairman Williams: Thank you for the membership packet. I'm excited to receive it and to now have my very own membership number, Life Rune pin and membership card. I should have joined the National Alliance long ago, but there is no time like the present. Donny and I are so grateful every day to be raising our family with Cosmotheist beliefs, living on National Alliance property. I thank you once again for giving us this opportunity and to work every day to do great work for our race. My heart is full. It makes me so proud to see my soulmate and beautiful son on the front of last month's BULLETIN (with you and Ray, of course). I'm not sure how, but somehow I want to inspire more women to join our cause. When I figure that out, you'll be the first to know. Thanks again, — Barbara MacMullen, West Virginia

Chairman Williams responds: We are so lucky to have you and Donny, and now Ray, on staff now, taking care of Alliance business at our West Virginia campus. Since you wrote this note I should report that you have accepted the responsibility of answering the overflow of considerable correspondence and inquiries that the National Office and National Vanguard have received. That is going to be a big help to other staff who have way too much to do already.

Chairman Williams, thanks for printing Ray's report in our last BULLETIN. What a good job he did in summing up what work should be. $200 check enclosed to catch up last month's and this month's dues. Another check for $100 is for three books: Cosmotheism, Fame of a Dead Man's Deeds, and Oliver's History and Biology. I'm staying busy with improvements to my house and to my mother's, while also studying books I've previously ordered from our bookstore and devouring the many articles at nationalvanguard.org. I send my best wishes to everybody at the Alliance and hope to join with you in person when the time is right. — G.B., Wisconsin

Dear Will, Lana, and company: I hope this letter finds you all in good health, free of the Shanghai Shakes. $60 enclosed to catch me up on my dues. My new job doesn't pay that well but offers the structure and stability I have been needing and has my finances back in a healthier state. This global pandemic has shown how weak our current system really is. The panic buying that began earlier this month made it obvious to me that most regular people were just waiting for any indication that the otherwise rosy outlook from Washington would turn sour. So many seemed to turn into "preppers" overnight, making the three-month food supply I regularly keep on hand the rational choice. If only they could see our demographic plight with the same urgency as their toilet paper needs! I suppose that will come in time, though, as the situation in local communities breaks down, and they realize that Juan, two doors down, is not their kin. I'll be watching Nashville closely as the word is getting around that the situation there is starting to boil over.

On a separate note it was especially encouraging to read the introduction of our new staffer, Ray, in last month's BULLETIN. He, combined with the nice family already there, I'm sure will keep our West Virginia property in fine shape. Soon I hope I and my family will have the privilege of visiting there as well as our National Office here in Tennessee. Keep safe! — D.S., Tennessee

Dear Chairman Will: ...I am not the only person who sees that as the situation worsens for our people in the darkening cities, as those become more and more precarious places to live, "White flight" will no longer be just from those lost cities to the suburbs, but to rural locations like the ones the Alliance has in southern Appalachia. Dr. Pierce had it right. Keep up the good work, preparing for that day. — O.P., North Carolina

To the National Alliance: My name is Jack. I'm 28 and from Michigan. I am a supporter of what you guys do. I haven't always cared about my heritage, and like a lot of White folks today, I was conditioned to be ashamed and feel guilty about my roots. I "woke up" about three years ago when I tried to listen to what identitarians were saying, at that time thinking they were wrong. What I found, however, while trying to understand why they thought that way is that they are in fact right. After learning what I know about who we are, our great past, and how things came to be the way they are today, I want to do my part any way I can to help wake other White folk up to the truth. For me, honestly, it was hard and still is sometimes to be thought of as a "racist" by old friends. But there is just no going back after knowing the truth of things... — Jack, Michigan (Internet correspondent)

Chairman Williams responds: We get much half-hearted mail like Jack's. He "woke up" three years ago and says he supports us, but doesn't put his money where his mouth is. He hung around "Identitarians," but little or no real direction was provided. Jack wants to do his part, but is still uncomfortable being considered a "racist." We'll leave the door cracked for Jack, waiting for him to find his backbone; he doesn't sound quite ready for the National Alliance. The members I like seeing are the ones who read Building a New White World: What is the National Alliance?, like what they see, and grasp the urgency of our race's situation — and then act as responsible men and women of our race. These members immediately print out the membership application, pull out a pen, sign the pledge of support, write a check for the application fee and first month's dues, and drop it in the mail to us. They don't wait three years and worry that they may be known as a "racist." Many reading this did just that and can size up others of like mind who should be recruited to join their strength with ours. Let us find them.

"Activism Begets More Activism"

This truism about activism was sent along with the photo below of one of our stickers, placed on a light pole in Frederick, Maryland. It is so easy to do this sort of activism. Just be discreet and legal — remember that CCTV cameras are everywhere in this era of massive surveillance, so sticker responsibly. There are thousands of locations where public notices are allowed to be posted. The safest locations to sticker are on anything you own, or anywhere you can place our sticker with a grouping of other stickers or notices that are already there. (High-resolution graphics for creating National Alliance stickers and fliers can be found at natall.com/fliers — download them from our site and print them yourself or at your local print shop.)

Another form of activism is the mailing of our material to target groups who are likely to share the Alliance's outlook on one or more issues. Member J.G. in Maryland, after reading our "Why They Want to Disarm You" flier that was inserted in the February BULLETIN, was motivated to do just that. He collected the names and current addresses of 300 White prospects — First and Second Amendment enthusiasts

Dear Concerned Patriot,

Please read the enclosed flier that addresses the issue of gun control. You may or may not agree with its premise, but you should at least recognize that there is a serious movement that plans to disarm us, then, when that is accomplished, to deny our uniquely valued American freedom of speech.

Our organization is trying to reach our people to give them hope in these times of crisis when there seems to be so little hope. Wall Street has lost nearly a third of its value this month after reaching its all time high last month; the Chinese virus has many of us suddenly out of work and living in fear to even leave our homes.

Our elected politicians can't seem to work together to solve problems as they once were able to do. Political gridlock continues to worsen. Our nation couldn't be more divided and it is now clear that the democratic electoral process is not going to solve this division. The Republican Party is not going to resolve the mess our nation is in, and certainly the Democrat Party is not, with its growing ranks of "minority" special interest groups demanding this and that for free, pushing the nation further in debt. The future for young Americans will be grim indeed unless we can reverse current trends.

Thanks for the few minutes of your time it takes to read the enclosed flier. If you feel that what the founder of the National Alliance, Dr. William Pierce, had to say in this flier resonates with you at some level, consider checking out our Web sites — listed on the enclosed National Alliance business card — for more information. Let us hear from you if you are interested in what we have to say.

Sincere regards,

Will W. Williams
National Alliance Chairman

— and hand addressed and stamped 300 envelopes to be sent to them. The National Office supplied him with 300 each of those fliers, business cards, and return address labels, along with a cover letter on National Alliance stationary, signed by Chairman Williams, that mentions topical issues like the Wall Street disaster and the Chinese virus pandemic. J.G. got these postmarked on 30 March. Should we get just two per cent. of the White patriot recipients of this packet to join or support the Alliance it will have been a more than worthwhile project. A good number will visit our Web sites and become hooked on real news and information from a truth-telling organization.

Commentary by Chairman William White Williams

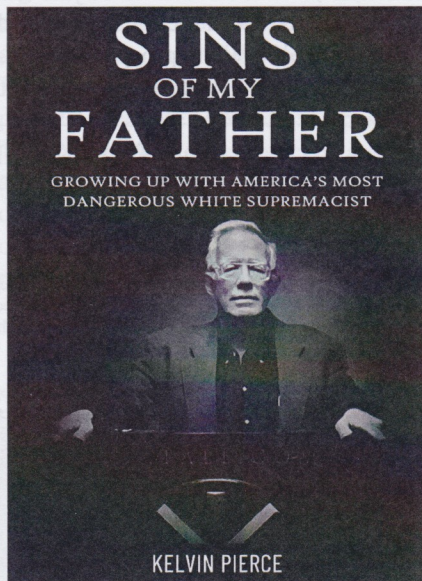

A Wretched Book

I learned in late February that Dr. Pierce's son, Kelvin, had written a book about his dad, Dr. Pierce, founder of the National Alliance. I ordered Sins of My Father: Growing Up With America's Most Dangerous White Supremacist from Amazon.com, read it, and posted a one-star (negative) review of it there on 5 March — and was notified that my review should appear within three days. It never showed up. But not being one who likes being silenced by Jews and their multi-billionaire collaborators like Amazon owner Jeff Bezos, and because the National Alliance has its own voice, I posted that banned review, below, and more, on our Web site as a comment below our article "Amazon Stomps on Free Speech."

I Hate My Daddy

The title of Kelvin Pierce's book is taken from Hebrew biblical references, like the proverb in Jeremiah: "The fathers have eaten sour grapes, And the children's teeth are set on edge." After reading Sins it's clear that it is Kelvin's teeth that are set on edge from eating sour grapes, not his father's.

One question I would ask Kelvin Pierce after reading his rather poorly edited book: Which Jewish watchdog group commissioned this book? Was it the Southern Poverty Law Center or was it the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith? After all, the final sentence in the blurb on the back cover is, "He [William Pierce] was labeled as the most dangerous and influential Neo-Nazi/White Nationalist in North America by the Southern Poverty Law Center and the Anti-Defamation League, over a 30-year period." Why would a son quote these haters' hateful opinions of his father who died 18 years ago?

William Pierce was no Christian. Like most Americans of his generation, he was raised Christian, specifically as a Presbyterian. Being highly intelligent, a scientist with a doctorate in physics, he “put aside childish things” (like belief in imaginary spooks up in the sky) when he became an adult. Kelvin Pierce apparently is a devout Christian, however (he prays a lot), and is into other eastern creeds from what I gather, reading this “tell all” book about his “evil” father.

Kelvin will never grasp the extraordinary religion his father founded, Cosmotheism — nor will he understand the National Alliance, that he says is a “hate group,” parroting the buzz word used by “hate watchdogs.” Kelvin is eaten up with irrational guilt, denies his own race, freely admits to near-terminal depression, self-doubt, and low self-esteem, and has subjected himself to years of therapy to deal with these issues. The only chapters in Sins that seemed to me to be wholly Kelvin’s personal recollections were of the hang gliding hobby he and his father shared, and about his admirable humanitarian work: rebuilding a decrepit orphanage in Georgia, the former Soviet Socialist Republic, years after his dad’s death. The rest of the book, even pre-teen memories from 55 years ago of discipline and corporal punishment for the author’s frequent mischief and for lying to his father seem to this reader to be embellished or edited to fit the “evil hater” profile by an anti-White ghost writer.

Readers who are interested in learning about the founder of Cosmotheism — arguably the greatest man of the second half of the 20th Century — and about his supposedly “most dangerous” National Alliance, or about the SPLC or ADL for that matter, can gain a more balanced, more honest perspective of William Pierce’s life’s work and achievements by searching for those subjects, starting here — <https://nationalvanguard.org/2018/09/our-cause-by-dr-william-l-pierce/> — rather than by reading this “dump on Daddy” purgation.

I don’t recommend anyone waste his money on this book, but should anyone reading this BULLETIN have purchased Sins, please do write a review as a “verified purchaser,” one that will likely get past the censors and offset the five-star reviews put there by Kelvin’s wife and friends.

Who Not to Recruit

By avoiding the recruiting of defectives to our Alliance, by the process of eliminating those “marginals” who might otherwise be eligible for membership, we gain a good idea who we do want to stand with us. This month we continue with the advice from Dr. William Pierce on the type of people we want to avoid recruiting, as he addresses the type of person he describes as “the freak.”

The freak: Persons with severe character or personality defects — psychopaths, homosexuals, habitual criminals — tend to gravitate to the fringes of society. They are likely to be shunned by people in the mainstream, and they look for company wherever they will be accepted. Often this is the case with people whose defects are not so severe as the aforementioned but who simply are not able to cope well outside of an institutional setting. Freaks are the bane of every organization with an ideology or a program that puts it at odds with the mainstream. They should be avoided like the plague.

Most National Alliance members do not realize how many severely defective White people there are in American society. The ones who shuffle along the sidewalk mulling to themselves, their brains ruined by decades of heavy drinking, are only the tip of the iceberg. People who believe that government agents follow them everywhere and spy on them, or that Jews are trying to control them by beaming electromagnetic radiation at their heads from an apartment across the street, or that they are the reincarnation of Adolf Hitler, or that they are receiving guidance from an extraterrestrial mentor are legion. Freaks probably make up somewhere between five and ten per cent of the White population in the United States. At a rally or convention of a typical Politically Incorrect group the percentage will run even higher, and the freaks will be much more noticeable, because they feel themselves among friends and don’t pretend to be normal.

Fortunately for the National Alliance there are many leftist-liberal fringe groups which welcome homosexuals and some other categories of freaks, so that our task of filtering them out of the pool of potential recruits is made easier. And there are hundreds of "New Age" groups to draw off the people with some sort of bizarre hallucinations about reincarnation or extraterrestrial guidance. Likewise, our known intolerance toward non-copers tends to keep ne'er-do-wells, alcoholics, drug abusers, and permanent food stamp recipients away from our doorstep. Nevertheless, the recruiter must always be on the alert for recruits with severe character defects or personality disorders. There has been far too much tolerance for freaks among White racial groups in the past. They are, on the average, a larger liability than an asset to any organization which admits them to its ranks.

The April BULLETIN will conclude this series on the six types of people that Dr. Pierce wisely advised members should avoid recruiting

"Keep your head, while those around you lose theirs..."

That is paraphrasing Rudyard Kipling's valuable advice. The month of March has been consumed with news of Wall Street losing a third of its value and of the worldwide Chinese Virus pandemic that is crippling society for at least the foreseeable future. I've always heard from some people on our side that "things must get worse before they will get better." Things are getting pretty bad now, with the worst decline of the stock market since the Depression 80 years ago, coupled with what some have compared to the 1918 Spanish Flu pandemic in which 20 to 50 million died. Remember what D.S. in Tennessee said this month about Nashville "boiling over," and throw in the recent devastating tornadoes — "Music City" is having a crisis like never experienced before.

Don't panic. Keep your heads. This crisis, too, will pass. Be cautious, but recall the words of the current Chicago mayor, ultra-Zionist Jew and Clintonista, Rahm Emanuel: "You never let a serious crisis go to waste. And what I mean by that it's an opportunity to do things you think you could not do before." Our members and supporters should see this crisis as an opportunity to advance our cause. Take heed of the introduction to the 28 March American Dissident Voices broadcast, in which host Kevin Alfred Strom shows us the positive side of the self-imposed isolation that most of us are under these days:

Many of you... have fewer duties to perform, since your jobs are on hold. At the very least, you're driving and going out less. You have more time, and nothing is more valuable than time. The crisis has given you some time for peace and reflection, and maybe, just maybe, you are finding that this peace and reflection is worth more, far more, than the money it replaced. If you're not finding that to be true, may I suggest you're doing it wrong. You're not using your time reflecting on what really matters.

Be creative. Think of novel ways to get more of our people's eyes on our Web sites. Everyone with a computer can use this tool and his extra time while isolated at home. Write me and let me know how you have used this time of crisis for Alliance-building, using our postal address or via my chairmanwilliams@natall.com email address. W. W. W.
