

THE SCOOP ON YOUR DOG'S POOP

BLACK

Black doo-doo could be a sign of blood entering their stomach and getting digested. This can mean that your dog may have an ulcer in their stomach or intestines. They could also have eaten some aspirins or rat poison.

See your Vet

RED

Seeing red is a sure sign of blood. This could result from:

- Colon inflammation or bleeding in their gastrointestinal tract
- An injury in your dog's rectum
- An infection in your dog's anus or anal glands
- Worst case scenario could be a tumor

See your Vet

BROWN w/
MUCUS

A slight mucous layer is normal. When a very substantial, thick layer of mucous covers the poop, your pooch has inflammation in his colon from dietary indigestion, stress, parasites or an infection.

See your Vet if it happens more than once

ORANGE

Orange poop could mean problems in their liver, gall bladder or bile ducts. Sometimes, it turns that color because food's passing too quickly through your dog's. Still, you should have a vet check out your pet just in case.

See your Vet

PURPLE
/PINK

Pink or purple dog poop can be a symptom of HGE (short for hemorrhagic gastroenteritis). HGE can be caused by a variety of things, including:

- Diseases of your dog's immune system
- Intestinal parasites/bacteria
- Eating something toxic or that isn't food

See your Vet ASAP

GREY/GREASY

Grey or greasy poo comes in big, soft mounds, and could mean EPI (Exocrine Pancreatic Insufficiency), better known as maldigestion. German Shepherds and Collies are especially prone to getting EPI. A vet can treat EPI in your dog easily.

Call your Vet for possible appt

GREEN

Green poop can be a sign that your dog's eating way too much grass. It could signify something much worse, though, like parasites or eating rat poison. Take your dog to the vet so you can know for sure.

Call your Vet for possible appt

YELLOW

If your dog's poo is coming out yellow, it could be a sign of an upset stomach. Check the stuff your dog eats—something might not agree with them. And if the problem persists, please make an appointment for you furry friend.

See your Vet if it persists

BROWN w/
WHITE SPOTS

If their poop has little white specks in it, your dog might have worms. Take your pet to the vet soon than later.

See your Vet