DID YOU KNOW?

Channel Master

Streaming all of your TV content is not a great idea.

The days of unlimited data use from residential Internet companies are nearly extinct. If you are planning to stream live TV, just be aware of the high data use impact it is likely to have on your household. Using a TV antenna is a great way to avoid this issue, and the quality you get from a TV antenna is much better than the quality you get from a live stream. Stream only what you need to and let the TV antenna be your live TV workhorse.

You can have a channel guide and a DVR for your TV antenna.

You don't have to give up the DVR when you cut the cord. Antenna DVRs let you pause and rewind live TV and set timers for your favorite shows, just like Cable and Satellite DVRs. If you're lucky enough to have discovered the value of a TV antenna, you've also probably discovered that your TV doesn't provide a guide for the antenna channels. Antenna DVRs solve this problem by providing a cable-like channel guide that is familiar and easy to use.

Over 80% of what we watch on TV is free with a TV antenna.

The "Big 6" broadcast networks, ABC, CBS, FOX, NBC, PBS and The CW, are by far the most-watched TV channels in America. Of the top 50 most-watched TV shows in 2016/2017, only six came from Cable networks. Because the broadcast networks can be received for free with a TV antenna, it makes the high price of Cable TV even more unfathomable. To put things in perspective, paying for Cable TV is roughly the equivalent of leasing a car that you're only allowed to drive 3.6 days per month.

There's no such thing as an "HD" TV antenna.

The broadcast signal is HD/Digital, not the antenna itself. Don't fall for the marketing hype and pay more than you should. An antenna from the 1970s would receive the same digital signals as any antenna you can buy today.
