

Your or You're

1. Draw five lines and match each sentence to the correct missing word.

your

you're

- I really like _____ new bike.
- I'm glad that _____ my friend.
- _____ the best player on our team.
- Don't forget _____ school bag!
- Is _____ grandad visiting today?

2. Complete each sentence by adding the correct word your or you're.

If _____ late, you won't be able to come on the trip.

Tell me when _____ going to the park.

Is that _____ dog?

_____ birthday is on the same day as mine!

I think that _____ the best speller in this class.

3. Read the extract below. If the words your or you're have been used incorrectly, underline them.

There are five mistakes to find in total.

"Tomorrow is you're school trip to the Roman baths," Uncle Jack reminded me. "I hope that your not going to be late like you were last time."

"Hey! That was you're fault, not mine! Don't you remember? Your alarm clock didn't go off in time," I explained.

"It doesn't matter now," Uncle Jack interrupted, "Tomorrow, we'll work together to make sure that your not late. Now, have you packed you're bag?"

"Yes," I replied. "Have you set your alarm clock?"

Your or You're

1. Read each sentence. Then, put a tick in the correct box to show which homophone is missing.

	your	you're
Is that _____ stepsister who's competing at the moment?
"Are you going to eat _____ vegetables?" my gran asked.
I think that _____ going to end up naming that dog 'Berty'.
_____ birthday party is going to be so much fun!
When _____ finished, tidy up and put the paints away.

2. Complete each sentence by using the correct homophone your or you're.

_____ new house is a lot closer to mine than your old one was.

I think that _____ really going to like our new science teacher.

Was it _____ idea to mix vinegar and bicarbonate of soda together?

I don't believe that this is really _____ neatest handwriting.

The next time you do this, _____ going to have to be a bit more organised.

3. Read through the extract below. Each time the homophone your or you're has been used incorrectly, underline it.

Are you annoyed because your dog just won't listen? If you say, "Fetch you're ball!", do they just look at you as if to say, "Your closer than I am. Why don't you do it?"

Then, if you change your tactic and say, "Chase your tail!", do they then go and pick up the ball?

If this sounds like you and you're beloved pooch, then your not alone and help is just around the corner. Simply, call the number below to schedule your first appointment.

Within days, your sure to be astounded at how quickly you're dog can be turned into an expert listener.

Your or You're

1. Complete each sentence by using the correct homophone your or you're.

Sometimes, I wonder if _____ ever going to finish that painting.

_____ really great at baking; you could be a professional one day.

What time is _____ dentist appointment next week?

Please stop that. _____ beginning to get on my nerves.

Do you think that _____ rabbit will get along with my guinea pig?

2. The following questions have been answered by a student. Tick the correct answers.

I can't believe that you're grandad used to be a champion hurdler!

Where is your football kit? It desperately needs to be washed.

If you want to see the Great Pyramids, your looking in the wrong place.

I feel really lucky that you're my partner for this project.

I'm sure that you're pet duck is better behaved than most dogs I know.

What advice would you give to this student to help them to get more answers correct next time?

3. Write a sentence that correctly uses the homophone your.

4. Write a sentence that correctly uses the homophone you're.

Your or You're Answers

1. Draw five lines and match each sentence to the correct missing word.

your

You're

I really like _____ new bike.

I'm glad that _____ my friend.

_____ the best player on our team.

Don't forget _____ school bag!

Is _____ grandad visiting today?

2. Complete each sentence by adding the correct word your or you're.

If you're late, you won't be able to come on the trip.

Tell me when you're going to the park.

Is that your dog?

Your birthday is on the same day as mine!

I think that you're the best speller in this class.

3. Read the extract below. If the words your or you're have been used incorrectly, underline them.

There are five mistakes to find in total.

"Tomorrow is you're school trip to the Roman baths," Uncle Jack reminded me. "I hope that your not going to be late like you were last time."

"Hey! That was you're fault, not mine! Don't you remember? Your alarm clock didn't go off in time," I explained.

"It doesn't matter now," Uncle Jack interrupted, "Tomorrow, we'll work together to make sure that your not late. Now, have you packed you're bag?"

"Yes," I replied. "Have you set your alarm clock?"

Your or You're Answers

1. Read each sentence. Then, put a tick in the correct box to show which homophone is missing.

	your	you're
Is that _____ stepsister who's competing at the moment?	✓
"Are you going to eat _____ vegetables?" my gran asked.	✓
I think that _____ going to end up naming that dog 'Berty'.		✓
_____ birthday party is going to be so much fun!	✓
When _____ finished, tidy up and put the paints away.		✓

2. Complete each sentence by using the correct homophone your or you're.

Your new house is a lot closer to mine than your old one was.

I think that you're really going to like our new science teacher.

Was it your idea to mix vinegar and bicarbonate of soda together?

I don't believe that this is really your neatest handwriting.

The next time you do this, you're going to have to be a bit more organised.

3. Read through the extract below. Each time the homophone your or you're has been used incorrectly, underline it.

Are you annoyed because your dog just won't listen? If you say, "Fetch you're ball!", do they just look at you as if to say, "Your closer than I am. Why don't you do it?"

Then, if you change your tactic and say, "Chase your tail!", do they then go and pick up the ball?

If this sounds like you and you're beloved pooch, then your not alone and help is just around the corner. Simply, call the number below to schedule your first appointment.

Within days, your sure to be astounded at how quickly you're dog can be turned into an expert listener.

Your or You're Answers

1. Complete each sentence by using the correct homophone your or you're.

Sometimes, I wonder if you're ever going to finish that painting.

You're really great at baking; you could be a professional one day.

What time is your dentist appointment next week?

Please stop that. You're beginning to get on my nerves.

Do you think that your rabbit will get along with my guinea pig?

2. The following questions have been answered by a student. Tick the correct answers.

I can't believe that you're grandad used to be a champion hurdler!

Where is your football kit? It desperately needs to be washed.

If you want to see the Great Pyramids, your looking in the wrong place.

I feel really lucky that you're my partner for this project.

I'm sure that you're pet duck is better behaved than most dogs I know.

What advice would you give to this student to help them to get more answers correct next time?

Pupils' own responses, such as: Don't forget that 'your' is a possessive determiner and usually starts a noun phrase. 'You're' is the contracted form of 'you are'.

3. Write a sentence that correctly uses the homophone your.

Accept any sentence that correctly uses the homophone 'your', such as: I really like your hair today.

4. Write a sentence that correctly uses the homophone you're.

Accept any sentence that correctly uses the homophone 'you're', such as: You're a very talented swimmer.