Architectural Survey File

This is the architectural survey file for this MIHP record. The survey file is organized reversechronological (that is, with the latest material on top). It contains all MIHP inventory forms, National Register nomination forms, determinations of eligibility (DOE) forms, and accompanying documentation such as photographs and maps.

Users should be aware that additional undigitized material about this property may be found in on-site architectural reports, copies of HABS/HAER or other documentation, drawings, and the "vertical files" at the MHT Library in Crownsville. The vertical files may include newspaper clippings, field notes, draft versions of forms and architectural reports, photographs, maps, and drawings. Researchers who need a thorough understanding of this property should plan to visit the MHT Library as part of their research project; look at the MHT web site (mht.maryland.gov) for details about how to make an appointment.

All material is property of the Maryland Historical Trust.

window lintels on the front façade. The current owners have removed the stucco that once covered both the granite quoins and fieldstone walls. A lower two-story stone addition (date unknown) extends off the east (rear) corner of the house.

The present house is believed by Mrs. Celia Holland, a Howard County architectural historian and author, to be located on that part of Talbot's Last Shift<sup>3</sup> purchased by Edward Talbot. The land remained in Talbot hands until 1850 and was known as "Pleasant Fields." It now sits on just over 2 acres, having been erected in 11 acres just prior to 1850. Landscaping has been used to hide this fine house from the Old Columbia Pike thoroughfare.

The late Edward A. Talbott<sup>4</sup> of E.A. Talbott Company, a well-known Ellicott Mills farm supply and building materials retailer which continued as a hardware store lumber yard in the heart of the Ellicott City Historic District until the end of the 20th Century, still owned the property in 1848 when he turned it over to his attorney, Edwin P. Hayden. Mr. Hayden was a state delegate for Howard County and its second clerk.<sup>5</sup> Apparently Hayden paid $300 for the land, but never got a deed from Talbott. When Talbott's estate actually sold the 11acres of land, after Hayden's death, to James Rowland on October 21, 1850,<sup>6</sup> E. Hammond, Hayden's executor<sup>7</sup> and a judge, conveyed the ground for $600, but Rowland ended up paying $3,000 for the lot.<sup>8</sup> This increase in property value, along with the note in Hayden's obituary specifically mentioning that his death in 1850 occurred at his recently complete residence,<sup>9</sup> implies that Hayden had the Italianate stone residence constructed between 1848 and 1850. There was a final release of the land in 1852.<sup>10</sup>

Edwin Parsons Hayden was born 11 August 1811 in Baltimore.<sup>11</sup> Hayden was educated at Baltimore College and studied law at Yale College in 1831-1832. In 1832, he was admitted to the bar in Baltimore. In 1836 he moved to his farm in Catonsville and began the practice of law at Ellicott Mills, where he located in 1840, building "Oak Lawn" near the courthouse.<sup>12</sup> Hayden borrowed money to build the large stone townhouse called "Oak Lawn" that since has been incorporated into the Howard County Courthouse in the Ellicott City Historic District. The 1842 tax assessments show an addition to the building.<sup>13</sup> "Oak Lawn" was later a school that was operated by part of Hayden's family.<sup>14</sup>

Edwin Hayden was described by one of his contemporaries as "a lawyer of more than ordinary ability. He was a man of handsome features, pleasing manner and an easy and graceful speaker." <sup>15</sup>

Hayden was "nominated by the Whig Party for the Legislature of Maryland in 1846, and in October 1846, was elected by a large Democratic vote. He took his seat in the House of Delegates and served until March 10, 1847, when he was appointed by the Governor to the office of Clerk of Howard County Court for the usual term of six years. He was a member of the Howard County Dragoons, and communicant of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church [Ellicott City]."<sup>16</sup>

When Hayden, 38<sup>17</sup>, died in May 1850 of heart problems<sup>18</sup>, he was a resident of Ellicott Mills and "died at his recently erected residence."<sup>19</sup> He left behind wife Elizabeth, also 38, and six children<sup>20</sup>: Charles L, 15, Horace, Mary, 9, Kate, 6, and William, 2.<sup>21</sup> By the 1860 Census, Charles was no longer living at home with his mother<sup>22</sup>, as were his younger siblings. Horace and Mary were teachers at the Oak Lawn Female Seminary.<sup>23</sup> (See below.) Horace had joined the Confederate States Army, 1861-1865. Another son became a prominent merchant in Baltimore.<sup>24</sup>

It would be important to see if any of Hayden's personal papers are stored at the Maryland Historical Society's Library, now closed for many months for construction. As the Hayden family was a prominent Baltimore family, it is possible some of his personal papers might include information on the construction of this fine stone house. Also important to the issue of National Register eligibility of the adjoining properties HO-559 (The William Brian House) and HO-622 (Massey House) would be to research those papers to see if Hayden provided the acre of land to Elizabeth Benoy, a tie that has not been established through Land Record research, and/or if her son-in-law, William Brian, might have been a mason for the construction of the Hayden residence(s).

Owner of the "Pleasant Fields" property from 1850-1866, Dr. James Rowland owned the house as indicated on the 1859 E. Sasche print<sup>25</sup>, and in 1860, according to the Martenet Map and the census, which listed him as age 62, with wife Ann E. Rowland, and his children: John W., 19, Rachel A., 18, James L., 16, and son Oregon, 13, who all had attended school within the past year. John W. and James L. had been born in Washington, the others in Maryland.

The 1862 draft report<sup>26</sup> noted that John [W.] Rowland, residing with his father at age 25, was not eligible for the draft, nor was James, 18 and a merchant, who was deemed to young to be eligible.

The 1860 Census lists the value of both real estate holdings and personal estates. James Rowland was listed as a farmer and was one of the dozen or so wealthiest men in the Ellicott Mills district at the time, if the figures can be trusted. The value of his real estate was listed as $25,000 and his personal estate as $25,000, with his wife's assets listed as another $5,000.

In the 1870 Census, Aberam Buckwalter (spelled incorrectly, as Land Records spell his name as Abraham Buchwalter, and his will spells the name Abram Buchwalter) was 81. He's shown as the owner of the house in the 1878 Hopkins Atlas. He paid $5,000 for the house and land, possibly reflecting depressed values after the Civil War.<sup>27</sup>

Buchwalter bought all of James Rowland's eleven acres in January 1866,<sup>28</sup> and also acquired part of a tract from Alexander Hobbs in 1867.<sup>29</sup>

After his death, his wife Margaret J. Buchwalter continued to live in the house that she called "Sunnyside," and in fact she died there.<sup>30</sup> According to her 1898 will,<sup>31</sup> the property was to be kept in trust for her unmarried neice, Margaret R. Pue.<sup>32</sup> Pue was permitted to and did buy the property when she married. In 1911, having married Talbot D. Jones, Margaret R. Pue Jones was able to buy the 26 acre parcel from the executor of Margaret J. Buchwalter's estate. Margaret and Talbot Jones took out a $3500 mortgage for the purchase of "Sunnyside." <sup>33</sup>

In December 1957, Margaret R. Pue Jones, widow, conveyed the property to Andrew Lee Nicholson, Jr. who in turn sold it in June 1958 to the current owners, Charles M. Cook and Jo-Ann Cook, his wife.

The Cooks have undertaken much restoration and rehabilitation work on the property, partially described in MIHP Form HO-405.

The house has both significant historical association with The E.A. Talbott, Edwin P. Hayden, Buchwalter, and Pue families, all important members of the Ellicott City community (NR Criterion B) and fine architectural features (NR Criterion C) which would make it individually eligible for the National Register. If ties can be established between E.A. Talbott or Hayden and Benoy or Hayden and Brian, then both the adjoining properties HO-559 (The William Brian House) and HO-622 (Massey House) could be included as a thematic district based on land ownership and associations.

Pleasant Fields faces west on the east side of old Columbia Road, 6/10 of a mile north of the intersection of Route 103. It is a three bay wide, two room deep, two story high, hipped roof, perfectly square field stone, Italianate style house, covered partially with stucco which is in the process of being removed. Two wide brick central chimneys rise from the north and south edges of the ridge line of its hipped roof which is crowned with a cornice decorated on its west elevation with a facia held by caste iron, scrolled brackets which decorate each of the four sides of the cornice.

Its west elevation features a central rectangular, double paneled entrance flanked by flat pilasters and surmounted by a flat wooden lintel and cornice held by five molded brackets. Three wide stone steps lead to this entrance, which is flanked by double windows, each rectangular, double-hung component holding four-over-four lights. The stylistic detail of the windows was reproduced by Mr. Cook in his work on the entrance frame. In addition they are decorated with projecting wooden sills held by three molded brackets and green shutters. Double light basement windows, surmounted by single, huge flat stone lintels, underline the first floor windows, while single second floor windows are vertically aligned to those in the first floor of the north and south bays. A central second floor eight-eight light french door covered by protective glass once entered on to a now non-existent one story high, flat roofed porch.

A two story high, gabled roof (running east-west) stone east wing holds a central brick chimney which extends from the north side of the square building's east wall, creating an "L" plan. It was once probably used as slave quarters and/or kitchen.

The interior features wide randam width pine floors, original staircase and woodwork, as well as fine marble mantles.

Historically the house is associated with the Talbott family who helped settle Howard County. The house stands on a part of what once comprised a 1,120 acre tract of land called "Talbott's Last Shift", surveyed in 1732 by John Talbott.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Pleasant Fields faces west on a high hill on the east side of Columbia Road, 6/10 of a mile from the intersection of Route 103. It is a three baywide, two room deep, two story high, hipped roof, perfectly square, field stone house covered with stucco, with two wide central brick chimneys and fine stone quoining. Gradually the stucco is being taken off, revealing the field stone construction and fine stone quoining.

The west elevation holds a central rectangular, double paneled entrance door, flanked by flat pilasters and surmounted by a flat wooden lintel and cornice held by five molded brackets. Three wide stone steps lead to this entrance which is flanked by double windows, each rectangular, doublehung component holding four-over-four lights. The two double windows are surmounted by the same lintel and cornice and stylistic detail of the central entrance and are further decorated with projecting wooden sills held by three molded brackets and green shutters. These two double windows are underlined by double light basement windows, surmounted by single, huge flat stone lintels and are set into granite and brick wells. Above the central west entrance is an eight-eight light french door covered by protective glass and flanked by green shutters, indicating that a balcony or second floor porch was once placed at this elevation. A one story high porch was constructed in 1901, for a leaflet giving information on William Jennings Brown was found by Mr. Cook when he took the front porch off the house, revealing the fine window decoration.

The south elevation features a first floor eight-eight light french door on the east side which is surmounted by a seven light segmental arched fanlight inset into the rectangular transom casing. This entrance was uncovered when Mr. Cook began to peel off the stucco exterior of the house revealing the stone beneath and the boarded up entrance. A rectangular double-hung second floor window, holding four-over-four lights is decorated with a projecting wooden sill.

The north elevation holds a rectangular entrance way approached by four wide stone steps. It is covered by a semi-hipped roof hood supported on each side by two scrolled brackets. Two first floor, rectangular, double-hung windows, holding six-over-six lights rest east of the entrance. They are surmounted by flat wooden lintels and underlined by flat wooden sills. Beneath rest two light basement windows with flat stone lintels.

The east wall holds two first floor windows in the first two south bays which hold six-over-six and one-over-one lights respectively, both having flat wooden lintels. Beneath these windows rest two light basement windows surmounted by flat stone lintels and above are vertically aligned two six-over-six light rectangular, double-hung windows. An additional two of these lie north. Around the entire house will eventually run a facia decorated with cast iron brackets as treated on the west facade. From the north side of the east wall extends a three bay wide, one room deep, gabled roof (running east-west) stone addition with central brick chimney, which was probably used as slave quarters and/or kitchen.

Its fifteen light rectangular central entrance faces north. West rests a first floor four-over-four light window and east a door which led down to the ground floor which is presently blocked in. Above rest squarish double-hung windows, holding six-over-three lights. Its south elevation from east to west features a rectangular entrance with wide granite step, two rectangular, six-over-six light windows and an additional four-overfour light window, all surmounted by flat wooden lintels.

A second floor entrance is vertically aligned to the first floor entrance on this wall, west of it is another charming six-over-three light window.

The east wall of this old stone kitchen holds a four light rectangular entrance on the south and a rectangular, double-hung, one-over-one light window on the north.

The interior is noteworthy for its central hall which meets the hall leading from the north central entrance. The staircase runs along the west side of this latter hallway featuring an original knewel post, banister and simply turned round, tapered spindels. The walls of this "L" shaped hallway retain their original plaster, probably due to the protection they have received from being interior walls.

All the floors are wide, random width, pine floors. The south side of the house holds a living room, dining room featuring drywall walls. The living room is located in the southeast corner of the square house and features two tall east windows, decorated with simple flat pilasters and flat lintels which have square corner pieces. All the wood work around the doors and windows are similar in nature to these. An interesting door opening was found by Mr. Cook when removing the stucco from the south wall of the house. He removed the 4X4 studs which were blocking in the opening and inserted a french door surmounted by a graceful fanlight encased in the rectangular space above the entrance. This is a notable addition to the south facade as well as a fine piece of restoration.

The charcoal grey mantle piece in this room is of the Greek revival period, simple flat marble pilasters, flat architrave with mantle piece shelve.

The mantle piece in the dining room, located in the southwest corner of the building, shares the same brick chimney as the living room mantle and is of similar style but composed of white marble. It was used for a stove, rather than a fireplace.

The original kitchen was probably located in the east wing attached to this square building. Mr. and Mrs. Cook, however, have created a lovely modern kitchen in the northwest corner of the house, far more convenient to their dining room across the hall.

The den or family room is located in the northeast corner of the building and features another fine marble greek revival style fireplace in charcoal grey marble. HO-405 Dist. 2 Pleasant Fields Page 3

The building has a circular driveway along its north side, which originally featured a porte cochere, springing from the north wall over the present north entrance.

Northeast of the house sits a charming hand made elm shingled, intersecting gabled roof doll house with exterior brick chimney. Additional features are its leaden paned west window, reputed to have come from the Patapsco National Bank in Ellicott City and its attic storage area.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

8 SIGNIFICANCE

Pleasant Fields is architecturally and historically significant.

Architecturally it is one of the most notable Italianate structures in Howard County, constructed of field stone in a perfect square, with an attached kitchen east wing. The square structure features huge flat granite lintels on its basement windows, fine stone quoining and unusual cast iron scrolled brackets decorating the cornice which encircles the entire hipped roof building.

The fenestration of its west facade consists of a double window on the north and south sides of the central entrance, each component holding a doublehung window with four-over-four lights. They are vertically aligned and proportunately scaled to the similar single second floor windows and feature exceptionally fine window decoration consisting of a flat wooden lintel and cornice held by five scrolled brackets, underlined by a projecting wooden sill held by three scrolled brackets.

The house is enhanced architecturally by the fine restoration carried on by its present owners, Mr. and Mrs. Cook, who have uncovered the fine randam width pine floors and uncovered and added architectural features which add to the beauty and integrity of the original structure. An example of discovery is the south entrance uncovered by Mr. Cook when removing the stucco covering the stone building.

An example of providing additional architectural features which enhance the beauty, while retaining the original integrity of the house, is the work done by Mr. Cook on the decoration of the central door. Mr. Cook added a flat lintel and projecting wooden cornice held by five scrolled brackets over the central entrance and flat pilasters which he had placed on each side of the entrance. This treatment matches identically the lintel, cornice and brackets over the first floor double windows in the north and south bays of this elevation.

This is only one example of the care and craftsmanship given by the Cooks in their total restoration of this fine Howard County Landmark.

Historically, the building is located on a tract of land once comprising 1,120 acres, surveyed in 1732 by John Talbott and called "Talbott's Last Shift". Another old property on this tract of land is believed to have CONTINUE ON SEPARATE SHEET IF NECESSARY HO-405 Dist. 2 Significance-Pleasant Fields Page 2 been one of its original stone farm houses and is early in style and detail, called Talbott's Last Shift, HO-390.

Acreage later was sold by John to his two brothers, Edward Talbott and Richard Talbott and to Richard Galloway and George Elliott.

The present house standing here is believed by Mrs. Celia Holland to be located on that part purchased by Edward Talbott. It remained in the Talbott family until 1850 and was known as Pleasant Fields.

The late Edward A. Talbott of E.A. Talbott Company owned the property in 1848 when he turned it over to his attorney, Edwin P. Hayden, a State Delegate for Howard County and its first clerk (1847-1850). Mr. Hayden lived at Oak Lawn, back of the Howard County Court House.

On October 15, 1850, Pleasant Fields was sold to James W. Rowland by Edward Talbott for $3,000 with Mr. Edward Hammond. acting as trustee or administrator of the transaction. The building was sold for $3,000.

In 1865 the building was sold for $5,000 to Abraham Buchwalter who held the property for forty-six years. He called the property "Sunny Side". On Nov. 21, 1911, Mrs. Buchwalter conveyed the property to Margaret R. Rue Jones with Rebecca O. Posey believed to be part owner from 1938 to 1946.

Today this old landmark gleams again under the care of Mr. and Mrs. Cook who have restored this fine old building to its original beauty, in place of what once surrounding owners complained of it as an eye sore.

Associated with the Talbotts of Howard County and architecturally, one of Howard County's most notable buildings, Pleasant Fields should be considered for inclusion to the NationalRegister of Historic Landmarks and the State Critical Areas Program. Both these goals could be partially accomplished by extending the present local Ellicott City Historic District (nomination to the Register is pending) to encompass Pleasant Fields, which should apply, in addition, for its own National Landmark status.
