Note: Your totals should add up horizontally to 120. If not, recheck your calculations. Enter the letter "D" in the blank line above column 1, "I" in the second blank, "S" in the third blank and "C" in the fourth blank. If your totals do add up horizontally to 120, plot the totals on the appropriate graphs on the next page with dots. Then connect the four dots with lines. Circle any points above midline, or 30. These are the strongest components of your personality.

A. How to find your DISC personality pattern

- 1. Enter your DISC scores: D_____ I___ S___ C____
- 2. Circle any letter that has a score over 30
- 3. Now enter the letters you circled in the following space, with highest score first, second highest score second, etc.
- 4. Look for this sequence of letters below; the corresponding personality pattern is the one that your DISC scores indicate

Example: John's DISC scores are D=20, I=42, S=34, C=24.

He would circle the "I" and "S" scores because they are over 30. His "I" is highest at 42, then his "S" at 34; thus his pattern is "IS". The pattern that matches "IS" is Advisor/Merciful/Counselor. (See Subtraits descriptions and explanations on page 5.)

Subtraits

(From http://www.axiomsoftware.com/disc/factors)

One way of understanding the relationships between factors in a profile is through 'sub-traits'. There are twelve of these, one for each possible pair of factors. For example, if a particular individual has a high Dominance score and a low Steadiness score, we can say that they are 'Self-motivated', and further interpret their profile in light of this.

Accuracy (high C. low I) refers to individuals for whom getting things just right is the main goal. This sub-trait is also sometimes referred to as 'Caution'. These types hate to make mistakes - they check and recheck their work, and are prone to correct errors in other people, whether or not they have been asked to do so. This need for certainty means that they will never take a risk unless absolutely necessary. They are also cautious in communication, rarely revealing more about themselves than a bare minimum.
Co-operativeness (high C. low D) applies to individuals who prefer to work in a team environment. This is the classic 'rule-oriented' sub-trait, relating to a person who needs to be absolutely sure of their position and prefers to use established regulations and procedures as a framework to support their ideas. Co-operative people are so called because this aspect of their personal style extends to the need for practical support from managers, colleagues and friends, and so they seek to maintain positive working relationships with others.
Efficiency (high D. low I) describes a person primarily motivated by results. Efficiency appears in a DISC profile when Dominance is significantly higher than Influence . An efficient individual is direct and assertive, but has little or no interest in personal matters. They take an objective, analytical view and drive towards their goals ruthlessly and relentlessly. They need to see results, and are quite willing to compromise quality or detail to get them.
Enthusiasm (high I. low S) relates to animated, expressive behavior. This is an outgoing and extrovert sub-trait that has much in common with Friendliness , but with the added dimension of energy and pace. This animated style shows their interest in a topic very strongly, and their effusive nature can act as a motivating factor for others. The nature of Enthusiasm tends to vary according to the relative level of the Dominance score in the profile. Where Dominance is low, an individual will tend to confine their expressive style to situations where they feel comfortable and accepted - they will rarely make direct criticisms or enter arguments, and are concerned about others opinions of them. Where the Dominance score is high, however, the Enthusiastic type is much less concerned about causing offence. Where this type of profile is concerned, the outgoing and expressive style remains, but is bolstered by a more assertive approach.
Friendliness (high I. low D) is essentially a social sub-trait, used of people who are open and warm to others. Friendly people love to talk - communication is the strongest element of this style. They are outgoing and extroverted, but they find it far from easy to concentrate on mundane tasks, and are easily distracted from such work by the opportunity for social interaction. Friendly individuals typically display a confident style, especially in circumstances where they feel comfortable and accepted. Despite this confidence, though, they are not particularly assertive - their low level of Dominance makes it difficult for them to be effective in pressurized or confrontational situations.
Independence (high D. low C) is used to describe self-reliant individuals who follow their own goals. Independence appears in a DISC profile when Dominance is significantly higher than Compliance . This type of person feels frustrated by rules and regulations - they prefer to follow their own ideas, and often work alone or in positions of isolated authority. This sub-trait is common, for example, in entrepreneurial styles. Independence is a highly competitive and determined sub-trait. Those who possess it in their behavioral styles are dynamic and direct. The precise way that it will appear in a person's behavior can often be dependent on the Influence and Steadiness scores in their profile.
