

Homestead Funds' Helpful Tips

Building Your Retirement Savings

A generation or two ago, workers relied on the “three-legged stool” for their retirement income. The three legs — Social Security, employer pension and personal savings — supplied a steady retirement income. Now, with Social Security retirement benefit formulas changing and many employers shifting away from traditional pension plans, workers must depend more on their own savings for retirement income. Also, Americans are living longer and health care costs continue to climb — which increase the need to save even more for retirement.

Put time on your side

Start saving for retirement early in your career to give your money a chance to grow over time. But, even if other commitments have prevented you from starting, it's never too late to save.

Determine how much you will need

The general rule of thumb is that you will need 70 percent to 80 percent of your pre-retirement income or more each year to achieve a comfortable lifestyle in retirement. Next, you should project how long you think your retirement may last. Make an educated guess, starting with the average life expectancy and factoring in knowledge about your personal health. Although the average life expectancy for Americans is 79,* as you age you prove your ability to live longer, and your life expectancy increases. For example, the life expectancy for those who reach age 65 is 86 — seven years beyond the average life expectancy.

*Source: World Bank

Source: IRS Publication 590, Appendix B, single life expectancy

“In addition to my 401(k) account, I contribute to an IRA. I tell callers that together, these two accounts can help them stash away the savings they’ll need. Here’s some information to help you decide which kind of IRA accounts may work well for you.”

—Mark Edwards
Registered Representative

Saving through an employer’s plan

There are several good options for accumulating savings for retirement, but contributing to an employer-sponsored retirement plan, such as a 401(k) or 403(b) plan, should be at the top of your list. These plans offer important benefits:

- Your earnings compound tax-deferred. You may also be able to contribute to a Traditional or Roth account, which gives you the flexibility of saving pre-tax or after-tax, whichever is most advantageous.

- You can contribute more to employer-sponsored plans than is allowed by individual plans.
- Your employer may make matching contributions to your account. If so and you do not participate, then you are passing up free money.

IRAs offer tax advantages and flexibility

An Individual Retirement Account (IRA) is another good choice to help you save for retirement. Like a 401(k) account, IRA earnings compound tax-deferred. But IRAs have some attributes and tax benefits that are different from a 401(k) plan:

- Depending on the type of IRA you choose, your contribution may be tax-deductible.
- IRAs are not linked to your job. You can make IRA-to-IRA exchanges or transfer your IRA from one investment company to another at any time.
- A Roth IRA allows you to make tax-free withdrawals, which gives you additional flexibility in deciding how best to draw down your total mix of retirement accounts.

Consider using a 401(k) plan account as your primary retirement savings account. Contribute as much to your employer’s savings plan as possible — at least make sure you contribute enough to collect the maximum matching contribution your employer offers.

Then, once you’ve “maxed out” your employer plan contributions, contribute to an IRA to complement your employer account. That gives you greater flexibility in managing distributions for tax efficiency.

How a Traditional IRA compares with a Roth IRA

	Traditional IRA	Roth IRA
Who may contribute	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Anyone who receives taxable compensation—no matter what age.• If you participate in an employer-sponsored retirement plan: Single filers who have a modified AGI of less than $66,000 in 2021 ($65,000 in 2020). Joint filers who have a modified AGI of less than $105,000 in 2021 ($104,000 in 2020). If your income is higher, you may be able to receive a partial deduction.• If you don’t participate in an employer-sponsored retirement plan but your spouse does: Your modified AGI is less than $198,000 in 2021 ($196,000 in 2020) to receive the full tax deduction. If your income is higher, you may be able to receive a partial deduction.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Anyone who receives taxable compensation—no matter what age.• Single filers who have a modified adjusted gross income AGI of less than $125,000 in 2021 ($124,000 in 2020). Joint filers who have a modified AGI of less than $198,000 in 2021 ($196,000 in 2020). If your income is higher, you may be able to make a partial contribution.

For information specific to your situation, consult a tax professional.

	Traditional IRA	Roth IRA
Maximum contribution per year (to all IRA accounts)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> For tax year 2020 and 2021, the annual limit is 100% of your earned income or $6,000 ($7,000 if age 50 or above), whichever is less. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> For tax year 2020 and 2021, the annual limit is 100% of your earned income or $6,000 ($7,000 if age 50 or above), whichever is less.
Tax/penalty at withdrawal	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Distributions from Traditional IRAs are generally taxed as income. If you take money out of a Traditional IRA before age 59 ½, you may be subject to a 10% premature distribution penalty. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Distributions from Roth IRAs generally are not taxed as income provided you are age 59 ½ or older and the account has been open for at least five years at the time of withdrawal. Premature distributions of account earnings may be subject to ordinary income taxes and a 10% penalty.
Tax benefits	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Tax-deferred compounding and possibly a current-year tax deduction. You may be able to deduct the amount of your annual contribution from your taxable income, depending on your modified adjusted gross income and whether you or your spouse participates in an employer-sponsored retirement plan. See note below. Unlike a Roth IRA, distributions from Traditional IRAs are generally taxable as income when received. If you participate in an employer-sponsored retirement plan: Single filers who have a modified AGI of less than $66,000 in 2021 ($65,000 in 2020). Joint filers who have a modified AGI of less than $105,000 in 2021 ($104,000 in 2020). If your income is higher, you may be able to receive a partial deduction. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Tax-deferred compounding and tax-free distributions. Amounts withdrawn from Roth IRAs are not subject to income tax if you are at least age 59 ½ and the account has been open for at least five years at the time of withdrawal. Unlike a Traditional IRA, Roth IRA contributions are not deductible.
Portability of account balance	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> You can exchange balances directly from one Traditional IRA into another Traditional IRA or transfer these accounts from one investment company to another at any time. When you retire or leave your job, you can move account balances from an employer-sponsored plan to a Traditional IRA. This is called a Rollover IRA. You may also be able to transfer an account balance in a Traditional IRA into your plan at work. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> You can exchange balances from one Roth IRA into another Roth IRA or transfer these accounts from one investment company to another at any time. You may be able to move amounts from a Traditional IRA into a Roth IRA, but taxes would be due. This is called a Roth conversion. Account balances may not be rolled over into an employer-sponsored plan.
Required Minimum Distributions (RMDs)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> After age 72, you must start taking required minimum distributions from this account. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> There is no age at which you must take distributions from this account.
This account may be appropriate for you if...	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> You are eligible to make a tax-deductible contribution. You earn too much to contribute to a Roth IRA. You do not need your savings until at least age 59 ½. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> You are not eligible to make a tax-deductible contribution to a Traditional IRA. You think you may be in a high tax bracket at retirement. You do not want to be forced to start taking RMDs. You want to avoid the Roth 401k Required Minimum Distribution (RMD) rules by rolling your Roth 401k into a Roth IRA. You intend for this account to be part of your estate. Assets from a Roth IRA can be passed on to heirs, free of income tax.

Understanding Traditional and Roth IRAs

Use the table inside to see whether a Traditional or Roth IRA works best for you.

Contributions to Traditional IRAs may be tax-deductible

If neither you nor your spouse participates in an employer-sponsored retirement plan, your entire contribution to a Traditional IRA may be deductible. If you do participate in an employer-sponsored retirement plan, the deductibility depends on your annual income and tax-filing status.

For more information, call us at 800.258.3030 to speak with one of our friendly client services associates and to request a prospectus.

We have helpful tips on other investment topics, too!

Download a complimentary fact sheet about any of the following topics from our website at homesteadfunds.com under or call one of our friendly associates at 800.258.3030. We're here to help!

- Deciding What to Do with Your 401(k)
- Handling Investment Risk
- Managing Your Savings in Retirement
- Saving for Education
- Simplifying Tax Time for Investors
- Taking Your Required Minimum Distribution
- Understanding Mutual Fund Costs

Put your IRA contributions on cruise control. If you've tried to invest regularly but had trouble maintaining the discipline, consider Homestead Funds' automatic investing program. This convenient way to build your retirement savings may reduce your stress level so you can focus on other important matters. Automatic investing does not ensure a gain or protect against a loss in a declining market.

Investing in mutual funds involves risk, including the possible loss of principal. Past performance does not guarantee future results.

Investors should carefully consider fund objectives, risks, charges and expenses before investing. The prospectus contains this and other information about the funds and should be read carefully before investing. To obtain a prospectus, call 800.258.3030 or visit homesteadfunds.com.

Homestead Funds' investment advisor and/or administrator, RE Advisers Corporation, and distributor, RE Investment Corporation, are indirect, wholly owned subsidiaries of NRECA.

© 2021 RE Investment Corporation, Distributor. 04/21

HTBUILDRETIRE

homesteadfunds.com | 800.258.3030

