LAW AT THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

The University of Sydney Law School is one of the world's leading law schools, ranked 14th in the world in the 2018 QS World University Rankings. We have more than 160 years experience as a legal educator.

Outstanding scholarship

The University of Sydney is an innovator in the legal world. You will be taught by staff who are acclaimed legal educators, renowned researchers and respected practitioners. We also welcome prominent international scholars and leaders, including those from the judiciary and government.

International engagement

We are part of a highly regarded group of law schools that includes Harvard in the United States, Oxford and Cambridge in the UK, and Peking and Tsinghua in China. You will have an invaluable opportunity to gain international experience and apply the skills and knowledge you learn at Sydney to an international career.

Our exchange program includes partnerships with law schools across North America, Europe and Asia, while our offshore program, which is open to students at all levels of study, offers you the chance to select from one of Australia's most comprehensive collections of overseas intensive units of study in law.

Student society

The student-led Sydney University Law Society (SULS) organises a range of activities, including social events, study support, mooting and skills competitions, careers events, sports, and initiatives that inspire you to see the law as an instrument for social change. As a Sydney Law School student you'll automatically be part of SULS, giving you the opportunity to make lifelong friends and develop a strong professional network.

Alumni impact

As a graduate of Sydney Law School, you will be ready to build a career in a wide range of fields, both within and outside the legal profession. Our alumni can be found in legal and non-legal roles around the world. Join the only Australian law school to produce six prime ministers; the first Australian law school to admit women; and the legal educator of three of the nation's five female High Court judges.

Purpose-built facilities

Our instantly recognisable building on the Camperdown Campus is just 10 minutes from the centre of the city. It offers superior teaching facilities and a dedicated moot court, along with mediation and library facilities that are among the best in the world.

We also have teaching spaces in Castlereagh Street in the city for postgraduate studies in law. These facilities include four teaching rooms, meeting rooms, a lounge for networking and other events, and flexible learning spaces for students.

Scholarships

Sydney Law School offers a number of generous scholarships designed to recognise potential, assist those in need, reward high achievement and support future success. See page 52 for details.

YOUR STUDY OPTIONS

Whether you wish to become a lawyer, expand your legal knowledge or you are a non-law professional who needs some legal expertise, our programs will meet your needs.

From an undergraduate Combined Law program to the postgraduate Juris Doctor and our master's degrees, we deliver depth, breadth, and a world-class legal education.

Bachelor of Laws (LLB)

Ideal for high school leavers, our Bachelor of Laws program provides a first-class legal education for a successful career in a dynamic global environment. You will study for this degree in combination with another degree in arts, commerce, economics, engineering or science.

Master of Laws (LLM)

Our flagship Master of Laws provides lawyers with expert, in-depth, specialist legal knowledge. You can select all units of study in one area of expertise or combine various fields of study.

Individual units of study

Postgraduate students can choose individual units of study in specialist areas. We offer you the flexibility to complete these in intensive mode or throughout the semester, and they can be credited towards a degree in the future.

Juris Doctor (JD)

Our Juris Doctor is a graduate-entry professional law degree that provides a pathway into the legal profession for people who already have a degree in another discipline.

With full-time or part-time study options, you'll gain the academic knowledge and skills for admission to practise law in Australia.

Specialist master's degrees

Specialist master's degrees and graduate diplomas offer opportunities for both lawyers and non-lawyers to gain or extend their knowledge in an area of the law of their choosing. We offer specialist coursework degrees in Administrative Law, Business Law, Criminology, Environmental Law, Health Law, International Law, Jurisprudence, Labour Law and Taxation Law for those with or without a legal background.

Research degrees

Our postgraduate research degrees equip you for a career in advanced research, policy development, public service, tertiary teaching or professional leadership. Work alongside some of the world's brightest and most accomplished academics.

MEET OUR STAFF

Our staff are acclaimed legal educators, world-renowned researchers and widely respected practitioners. We also attract visits from international scholars and leaders in the judiciary and government.

Here are just a few of our staff. For a complete list, please visit:

DALYELL SCHOLARS PROGRAM

For high-achieving students with an ATAR (or equivalent) of 98+, the Dalyell Scholars program gives you access to a range of enrichment opportunities that will challenge you alongside your most promising and talented peers.

As a Dalyell Scholar, you can draw on the rich interdisciplinary depth and breadth on offer at the University, cultivating the leadership and professional expertise to become part of our global network of leaders.

Named after Elsie Jean Dalyell OBE (1881-1948), a distinguished medical graduate of the University, Dalyell Scholars will have the opportunity to collaborate and network with like-minded world influencers.

In addition to completing distinctive Dalyell units of study, you will have access to enrichment opportunities, including:

- accelerated learning options, such as early access to advanced units of study
- access to specialised Language (Arts) and Mathematical Sciences (Science) programs (optional)
- tailored mentoring and professional skills development to enhance your study and career opportunities
- international experiences to develop your global perspective, including a $2000 global mobility scholarship.

To study as a Dalyell Scholar, admission is by UAC preference or invitation.

The Dalyell Scholars program is available in the partner degrees with the Bachelor of Laws:

- Arts/Law
- Commerce/Law
- Economics/Law
- Engineering Honours/Law
- Science/Law.

Visit our website for a full list of Dalyell Scholars courses available.

Who was Elsie Jean Dalyell?

A highly distinguished University of Sydney medical graduate, Elsie Dalyell OBE (1881-1948) was the first full-time female academic in our Faculty of Medicine. After travelling to London on a University scholarship and serving in the First World War, she conducted pioneering work with a medical team in Vienna, Austria, into childhood diseases. Her academic excellence and commitment to creating her own path are hallmarks of our Dalyell Scholars program.

BACHELOR OF LAWS (LLB)

The Bachelor of Laws is a professional law degree and your pathway to a fulfilling and challenging career as a legal practitioner.

Available through our Combined Law program, the LLB offers you the opportunity to study law in combination with some of the University's most rigorous degrees in arts, commerce, economics, engineering or science.

It includes the core legal units required for professional accreditation, coupled with a wide range of electives that allow advanced learning in both specialist and generalist areas.

Designed to provide a legal education that is challenging and rewarding, the LLB also equips you for the demands of the 21st century. It will enhance your intellect and skills through its interactive teaching approach and rigorous assessment regime.

There are several admission pathways for this degree, including direct entry from high school, tertiary transfer, the Future Leaders scheme, Cadigal Program, Special Consideration for Admission scheme, and elite performance.

COMBINED LAW DEGREES

Our combined law degrees will develop your critical thinking skills and capacity for deep, evidence-based analysis and problem solving, and give you a thorough grounding in professional ethics.

The following combinations are available:

- Arts/Law
- Commerce/Law
- Economics/Law
- Engineering Honours/Law
- Science/Law.

Each combination is five years in duration, with the exception of Engineering Honours/Law, which is a six-year program.

In the first three years of your program, or four years for Engineering Honours, you'll enrol in the non-law faculty of your combined degree (for example, the Faculty of Arts), then transfer to the Law School at the completion of your other degree for the final two years of your law studies.

In addition to core units of study in law, you'll have access to a broad range of electives from areas such as contracts, constitutional law, criminal law, corporate law, health law, environmental law, media law and international law. You'll also have the option to study master's units of study which may then be credited toward a Master of Laws (LLM) degree at Sydney Law School in the future.

Combined Law progression table

Note: One elective should be a jurisprudence unit.

* Legal Research I and II are zero credit point units but are compulsory examinable units in the Combined Law program.

** You may choose, instead, to take a maximum of two electives and complete the remaining compulsory units of study in Year 5 or Year 6 for Engineering Honours/Law.

ARTS/LAW

The highly regarded Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Laws will challenge your outlook and give you the skillset to think differently about how to find real-world, workable and ethical solutions to contemporary problems and issues.

The Bachelor of Arts (BA) degree provides an outstanding liberal arts education that prepares you to meet the challenges of the modern workforce, where expertise, inventiveness, logic and critical thinking come to the fore. It offers broad choice across more than 45 subject areas, including languages, digital cultures and a new minor in criminology. As an Arts/Law student, you will have the chance to explore your passions, interests and ambitions.

You will study the BA over three years and complete the equivalent of the first year of the Bachelor of Laws (LLB) at the same time. In years 4 and 5, you will take the remaining compulsory and elective units of the LLB.

Arts/Law students have the exclusive opportunity to undertake majors in media studies and global studies as part of the University of Sydney's new undergraduate curriculum. Media studies allows you to examine the history and theory of media production and communications, and acquire a formidable skillset in print, online and broadcast industries. Global studies equips you with the tools to understand globalisation and examine the impact of new technologies and practices on international relations.

You may choose to undertake honours in Arts through the Bachelor of Advanced Studies or integrated honours within the Bachelor of Laws.

“I chose Sydney Law School because of its diverse student community and reputation for academic rigour. Studying among open-minded, inquisitive peers and passionate lecturers is incredibly rewarding.

“During my time here, I’ve undertaken an internship at the Australian Law Reform Commission, conducting research on the incarceration rates of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. I found this valuable because it provided insight into a significant national issue and broadened my legal research skills.”

COMMERCE/LAW

Pursue your interests in business and law through our Bachelor of Commerce/Bachelor of Laws program and graduate with a degree that will open doors to excellent career prospects in both fields.

Develop foundational knowledge of law with the commercial, technical and management skills to launch your career as a legal practitioner, or step into the business world where a law degree is highly regarded.

Complementing your legal studies, the Bachelor of Commerce (BCom) combines business theory with practice, giving you a solid grounding in areas such as accounting, economics and business statistics.

You will be exposed to real-world business cases and experiences, drawn from our wide network of Australian and international business partners. You can also tailor your degree through the completion of at least one commerce major.

You need to complete six core units of study as part of the BCom, plus a commerce major or extended major. Majors include accounting, banking, business analytics, business information systems, business law, finance, industrial relations and human resource management, international business, management and marketing.

You may choose to undertake honours in Commerce through the Bachelor of Advanced Studies or integrated honours within the Bachelor of Laws.

Prerequisites

For Bachelor of Laws: None.

For Bachelor of Commerce: Mathematics (Band 4) or Mathematics Extension 1 or 2 (Band E3), or equivalent.

“I have really enjoyed the intimacy of my cohort as it has allowed me to build solid relationships with people whose values align with my own, such as having a genuine passion to make a difference in the community. I have also enjoyed opportunities to compete in moots, mentor in social justice schemes and participate in inter-faculty sports. I have interned at Qantas and Getty Images. I was recently recognised as Australia’s most promising law student – a ‘Future Leader’ in the legal industry, sponsored by Ashurst.”

Jasmin Hamade
Commerce/Law

ECONOMICS/LAW

Discover where economics and law collide with this versatile combination. Enhance your knowledge and expertise and choose from a career in business, finance or the law.

The Bachelor of Economics introduces you to a diverse, fascinating discipline that is crucial to understanding and solving the major problems and challenges the world faces today. You will develop a comprehensive understanding of the overall context of business and government, and the high-level technical skills to analyse economic and social data and events.

Gain an excellent grounding in economic theory and business statistics by completing a major in economics, agricultural and resource economics, financial economics or the more statistically based econometrics.

You will need to complete four core or compulsory units of study plus a major or extended major in economics or econometrics. You can select additional elective units in subject areas through the University of Sydney Business School, including accounting, international business, management and marketing.

You may choose to undertake honours in Economics through the Bachelor of Advanced Studies or integrated honours within the Bachelor of Laws.

Prerequisites

For Bachelor of Laws: None.

For Bachelor of Economics: Mathematics (Band 4) or Mathematics Extension 1 or 2 (Band E3), or equivalent.

“The University of Sydney has an incredibly vibrant student life. I was fortunate to travel to Japan for a mooting competition and I participated in debating and model United Nations competitions throughout Australia. I interned at the Shopfront Youth Legal Centre, a free legal service for disadvantaged youth. This internship allowed me to develop my skills in dealing with clients, while helping me bridge the gap between my theoretical learning and practical skills.”

ENGINEERING HONOURS/LAW

This six-year combined degree provides an excellent foundation for a career in law or engineering. From wi-fi to space travel, engineering and technology, professionals develop innovative and sustainable solutions to society's greatest problems.

Your law studies will focus on interpreting and applying the legal system and you will develop invaluable critical thinking skills and legal expertise.

Combining engineering and law, you can help to create smarter ways of running the world. In this program, you can take any of these engineering streams:

- Aeronautical
- Biomedical
- Chemical and Biomolecular
- Civil
- Electrical
- Mechanical
- Mechatronic
- Software.

You will spend your first three years studying a combination of engineering and law units, before taking your engineering specialisation in fourth year.

In your fifth year, you will complete your remaining compulsory law units followed by law elective units in sixth year.

Prerequisites

For Bachelor of Laws: None.

For Bachelor of Engineering Honours: Mathematics (Band 4) or Mathematics Extension 1 or 2 (Band E3), or equivalent.

“We live in a technology-driven world and with the rapid progression of innovation, new issues that are unprecedented are coming into existence; from AI to the rise of environmental refugees. This is where the intersection of the law and engineering will become increasingly important in the future. I wanted to take two disciplines I knew I was passionate about and equip myself to face the exciting and uncertain opportunities ahead.”

Rameen Malik

SCIENCE/LAW

The legal sector needs professionals who can understand and translate complex science. With this combined degree you will graduate with a suite of specialist skills that will allow you to carve out a niche in the legal sector, with jobs across patents, intellectual property and even forensics.

The Bachelor of Science offers more than 40 majors, programs and streams and a flexible degree plan. In first year you'll gain essential knowledge in the fundamental sciences. Second and third years are for specialisation – in your chosen stream, program, major or minors, with the option to take elective units of study from other faculties.

You will complete the equivalent of the first year of the Bachelor of Laws over the course of your three-year science degree. In fourth year you will take the remaining compulsory law units of study followed by elective units in fifth year. You will graduate with the skills to embark on a broad range of careers in law and the sciences.

You may choose to undertake honours in Science through the Bachelor of Advanced Studies or integrated honours within the Bachelor of Laws.

Timothy Cargill
Arts/Law

“I transferred to Sydney Law School after hearing from people in the legal profession that it provides an exceptional education that is highly valued by many firms and practitioners in Australia and around the world. The opportunity to develop technical expertise in the law under some of the world’s brightest legal minds has opened up excellent professional opportunities for me.”

Hannah Ryan
Arts/Law
Lawyer, Human Rights Law Centre

“The intellectual culture at Sydney and the support of both teachers and peers gave me the confidence to explore big ideas and the motivation to stay curious, which I’ve found invaluable throughout my career. The academic leaders in public law and media law really prepared me for my current role working on democratic freedoms at the Human Rights Law Centre.”

James Nguyen
Commerce/Law
Senior Associate, Allens

“There’s no doubt my education at the Sydney Law School is the foundation of my career. I’m an associate at Allens, working in the mergers, acquisitions and capital markets team. Private practice is such an exciting and fast-paced environment and nothing prepares you better for that than learning from some of the best legal minds.”

JURIS DOCTOR (JD)

What is the Juris Doctor (JD)?

The JD is a graduate entry professional law degree that includes study of all the required areas of knowledge for admission to practise law in Australia.

It provides a pathway into the legal profession if you already have a degree (that is not a law degree) or a law degree from overseas.

The JD will develop your skills in analysis, research, writing and advocacy. Our focus on international, comparative and transnational aspects of law will ensure you are well prepared for legal practice.

At Sydney Law School we offer a flexible program that allows you to study for the JD either full time over three years or part time over six years.

You can also choose from a wide range of electives that offer advanced learning and international perspectives, participate in our social justice program, or study master's units that may then be credited toward a Master of Laws (LLM) degree at Sydney Law School in the future.

Go on exchange to law schools in Asia, Europe and North America or experience other legal systems by completing one of our offshore units in China, the UK, Germany, Malaysia, Indonesia, Nepal and Japan. We also offer pathways to Oxford and Cambridge.

Whether you are planning to undertake further postgraduate study or research, or pursue a career as a solicitor, at the bar or in government service, industry or the not-for-profit sector, your JD will equip you with the analytical, ethical and problem-solving skills needed to excel.

“Being able to connect with so many highly esteemed teachers is amazing.

The immense expertise, industry knowledge and academic depth of my teachers make me grateful to be a student at Sydney Law School. The professors have great anecdotes, as they have often been part of the team on a landmark case you're studying in class!

“I really enjoyed taking part in law school competitions to get a feel for the skills and experiences of being a real-world lawyer. Additionally, I've undertaken international opportunities – I interned in intellectual property rights litigation at the Supreme Court of India and Delhi High Court, and will be completing my studies on exchange in Belgium.”

Xiaoqi Xu
Juris Doctor

“The University of Sydney is one of the most prestigious law schools in Australia. It is famous for its high-quality education. Sydney Law School makes me realise what kind of person I would like to become and the life I would like to live.

“Considering my background in both civil and common law jurisdictions, I hope to practise in the areas of multi-national litigation and corporate commercial law after graduation.”

Ryan Hunter
Juris Doctor

“In my three years doing the JD I have been taught by former High Court judges, practising barristers and leading professors whose academic writings shape the fields we study.

“Having an opportunity to engage with those teachers and academics in the classroom and outside – discussing assignments, projects and career options – enriches the experience at Sydney and has allowed me new insights into the material we are taught.”

Joel Phillips
Juris Doctor

“A highlight of my studies was representing Sydney Law School in the 2017 Philip C. Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition. It’s arguably the world’s most prestigious moot competition, and it’s certainly the largest.

“Our team won the Australian national rounds and then the international rounds, which took place in Washington, DC. I’ll never forget appearing before current and former High Court Justices and judges of the International Court of Justice!”

MAKE A DIFFERENCE – SOCIAL JUSTICE IN ACTION

We offer you the opportunity to gain practical legal experience while providing vital services to disadvantaged members of our community.

The Sydney Law School Social Justice Clinic allows you to apply your classroom knowledge to real-world cases and develop your skills in researching, case writing and client interviewing.

You will gain experience through partnerships with community legal centres and other organisations offering legal advice and representation to special interest groups. Experience the community impact of a pro bono legal service – provided without charge to disadvantaged clients.

Several community legal organisations and law firms have entered into partnerships with Sydney Law School, and they have an excellent track record of providing much-needed professional legal services to the community.

– sydney.edu.au/law/social-justice-clinic

Our partners

The Social Justice Clinic can arrange placements for you with the following organisations:

- Aboriginal Legal Service (NSW/ACT)
- Amnesty International Australia
- Arts Law Centre
- Environmental Defenders Office NSW
- Immigration Advice and Rights Centre Inc
- Justice Connect
- King & Wood Mallesons
- NSW Public Defenders Office
- Public Interest Advocacy Centre
- Redfern Legal Centre.

“One of the highlights of my degree was undertaking the Social Justice Clinic elective at Redfern Legal Centre (RLC). I enjoyed the close contact I had with clients and the exposure to social justice issues. It was not only an incredibly valuable part of my law studies, but it has inspired me to hopefully pursue a career in community legal centres. After finishing the elective, I decided to stay on at RLC and am now in a Practical Legal Training role, shadowing a solicitor in the Credit and Debt Team.”

EXCHANGE OPPORTUNITIES

Sydney Law School offers an extensive range of exchange opportunities with universities throughout the United States, Canada, Europe and Asia.

You can complete one semester of study overseas in your final year and receive credit towards your degree.

This provides an exciting and challenging way to broaden your academic horizons and enrich your life experience in different environments and cultures.

As a Sydney Law School student, two exchange programs are available to you: the Sydney Law School program and the University-wide program.

The Sydney Law School program enables you to participate in one of our exclusive agreements with 21 prestigious law schools. The University-wide program offers an additional range of law schools as exchange options.

If you are proficient in another language, you may be able to take up exchange opportunities at other overseas universities.

Sydney Law School exchange program

OFFSHORE OPPORTUNITIES

As a Sydney Law School undergraduate, Juris Doctor student or postgraduate student, you'll have the opportunity to experience overseas study through one of our short-term offshore programs.

Southeast Asia Field School

The Southeast Asia Field School will introduce you to the legal systems of Southeast Asia, with a focus on Indonesia and Malaysia. It emphasises legal pluralism – that is, the operation of different bodies of law for different groups within the same country – and compares how countries in Southeast Asia handle this complexity.

Sydney Law School in Europe

The Sydney Law School in Europe program offers you the opportunity to undertake a selected range of elective units of study in prestigious locations in Europe. Enrich your university experience by studying a comparative unit in historic and renowned universities.

In previous years locations have included the University of Cambridge and Humboldt University in Berlin.

Shanghai Winter School

The Shanghai Winter School is an elective unit of study comprising an intensive, three-week introduction to Chinese law. It offers you an opportunity to study the laws and legal system of China while experiencing life in Shanghai.

Kyoto and Tokyo seminars in Japanese law

Each of these seminars is an elective unit of study provided in Japan in February each year. The Kyoto seminar introduces you to Japanese law in a global context.

It covers the law's interaction with civil justice, criminal justice, business, politics, gender and the legal professions. The Tokyo seminar introduces you to Japanese business law. It looks at Japan's trade and investment environment, insolvency and corporate governance, consumer regulation and lawyering.

Himalayan Field School

The Sydney Centre for International Law offers the Himalayan Field School, an elective unit of study conducted over two-and-a-half weeks in Nepal. The unit exposes you to the role and limits of law in addressing acute problems of socioeconomic development and human rights in settings such as Nepal, one of the world's poorest countries.

PATHWAYS TO OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE

Sydney Law School offers a pathways program with the faculties of law at the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, two of the world's foremost law schools.

The program allows high-achieving LLB or JD students to embark on their final semester at either Oxford or Cambridge.

You will commence your last semester of study in the UK in late September. Upon completion, you will be awarded a University of Sydney LLB or JD and the relevant degree from either Oxford or Cambridge.

Participants in this program are required to cover all tuition, travel and living expenses involved, but are not required to pay final-semester tuition fees at Sydney.

University of Oxford

Bachelor of Civil Law

This is one of the most highly esteemed master's equivalent qualifications in the common-law world. You will be expected to analyse complex material critically and consider it from different perspectives.

Master of Law and Finance

If you have a background in law, this program offers you the chance to develop an advanced interdisciplinary understanding of economic and financial contexts. It combines a highly analytic academic core with tailormade practical applications derived from continuing collaboration with professional and regulatory organisations.

University of Cambridge

Master of Laws

This one-year coursework program offers outstanding students an opportunity to pursue legal studies at an advanced level in a challenging and supportive environment.

Master of Corporate Law

This program is widely recognised as one of the strongest degrees in the field of corporate law. It is an ideal graduate program if you wish to strengthen your credentials in business law or have an academic career in mind.

“Studying at Cambridge was a challenging but incredibly rewarding experience. I have often drawn on what I studied in Cambridge and it has had a lasting impact on the way I approach legal problems. Through the college system and college sports I also made a lot of friends from a wide range of disciplines and from all over the world.

“Since graduating I have been tipstaff to Justice Julie Ward, Chief Judge of the NSW Supreme Court's Equity division, and lectured in equity at Sydney Law School. This year I will commence as a graduate lawyer at Allens.”

POSTGRADUATE STUDY AT SYDNEY LAW SCHOOL

Our postgraduate coursework programs are highly regarded and provide students who have a legal background with specialist legal training. If you are from a non-legal background, you can acquire the legal knowledge needed to succeed in your current profession.

We offer one of Australia's largest and most specialised coursework programs in law. Our coursework program reflects the latest developments within the practice and profession of law, and you can experience instruction from domestic practitioners, international visitors and our own academic leaders.

The Master of Laws (LLM) is our flagship postgraduate degree and provides lawyers with expert in-depth specialist legal knowledge. Students can choose from the entire range of postgraduate coursework units of study offered in any given year by Sydney Law School. This gives you the opportunity to tailor the program to suit your needs.

You may select all eight units of study required to complete the degree in one area, such as International Law or Corporate, Securities and Finance Law. Alternatively, you may like to combine fields of study by selecting units in Commercial Law alongside those in Environmental Law, for example.

We also offer specialist coursework degrees in Administrative Law, Business Law, Criminology, Environmental Law, Health Law, International Law, Jurisprudence, Labour Law and Taxation Law for those with or without a legal background.

We offer a huge variety of units of study, most of which are taught intensively. This allows you to manage your study with your professional and personal circumstances. You will have the opportunity to share classes with students from various disciplines and experience a dynamic and interactive study environment.

Research themes

You can pursue your interests across 21 specialist research themes. To find out more, see page 45.

Master's degrees

These are ideal if you need specialised knowledge and skills, and want to:

- take the next step in your career
- gain professional qualifications for your next job
- upskill for your current role
- develop academic expertise in your chosen field
- expand your horizons.

They typically require one year of full-time study. If you can't commit to a full-time master's degree straight away, we also offer the flexibility of part-time study for domestic students.

Graduate diplomas

Graduate diplomas are usually based on master's degrees and offer a subset of the master's units. They are worth considering if you want to try out postgraduate study to suit your own circumstances – financial or time constraints – increase the breadth of your expertise and knowledge, or you don't quite meet the admission criteria for a master's degree.

Once you finish the graduate diploma, you may be able to progress to a master's degree – please note that progression requirements can vary.

A graduate diploma is also an excellent option if you don't want to commit to a full master's but still need a solid grounding in your chosen field. Find out more about your course at:

MASTER OF LAWS (LLM) GRADUATE DIPLOMA IN LAW

The Sydney LLM is a flexible and highly sought-after degree that caters specifically to the needs of the legal profession.

As a law graduate, you may choose from the entire range of units of study offered through Sydney Law School's postgraduate coursework program, allowing you to tailor an LLM program that suits your academic and professional needs.

If you study full time, it's possible to complete an LLM in one year by finishing eight units of study. If you study part time you have a maximum of six years to complete your degree.

Complete your master's degree through semester-length units of study

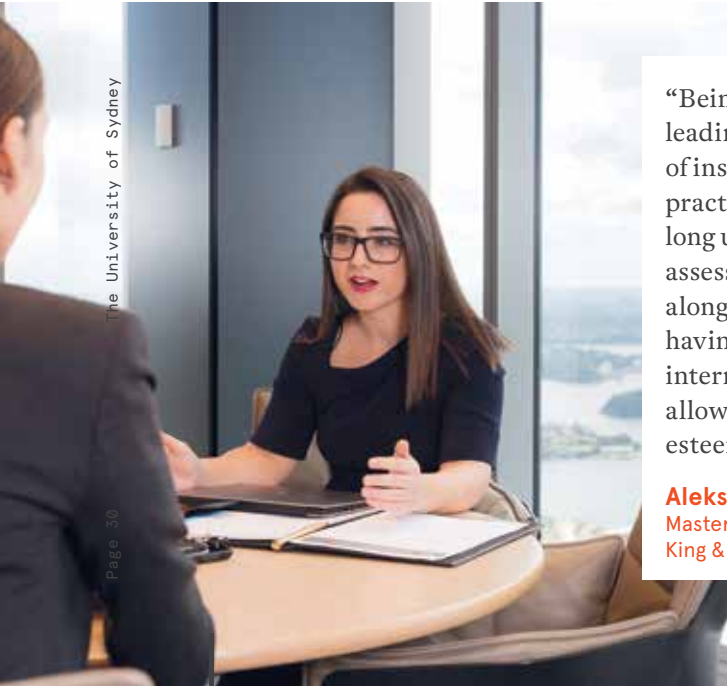

The semester-length delivery mode allows you to attend class once a week for 12 to 13 weeks. Classes are generally held on a week night, from 6 to 8pm. Assessments vary, but generally include either written assignments or take-home or sit-down examinations.

Please note that not all units of study are available in this mode.

Complete your master's degree through intensive units of study

The intensive delivery mode is a popular and flexible way to fast-track your degree. It condenses each unit of study into four to five full days. Units are taught either in block mode (over a single block of four to five full days in a row) or consecutive mode (over four to five full days spread over the semester, such as two days in one week and a further two days a fortnight later).

Please note that not all units of study are available in this mode.

“Being able to learn from sitting judges, practising barristers, leading academics and partners of law firms provided me with a mix of insight and knowledge that has been invaluable to excelling in my practice. The flexible course structure, with choices of semester-long units, intensive units, day and evening classes and specific assessment regimes, made balancing an intense full-time workload alongside the postgraduate study realistic and achievable. Also having the opportunity to study a range of subjects at a number of international law schools, including the University of Cambridge, allowed me to have the ‘exchange’ experience, travel and learn from esteemed academics.”

Aleksandra Ilic
Master of Laws
King & Wood Mallesons

Complete your master's in one area of study, or combine disciplines

Our master's degree enables you to choose from the entire range of postgraduate coursework units of study offered in any given year by Sydney Law School. You may choose to select all eight units of study from one area of study or you may combine areas of study by selecting units from different areas.

Complete a single unit of study to count towards an LLM or other degree

You do not have to commit to completing the entire LLM program straight away – you can just undertake a single unit of study. Later you might choose to continue your enrolment and progress with the LLM, or delay further study until another unit of interest is taught. As long as you complete the assessment for the unit, that unit can later count towards an award course, such as the Graduate Diploma in Law, LLM or another program.

Complete units of study in Europe, China, Japan, Nepal or Southeast Asia

As a Master of Laws student, you may enrol in offshore units of study. These include units taught as part of the Sydney Law School in Europe program, and those taught as part of other programs including the Shanghai Winter School. Whether the unit is taught in London, Cambridge, Berlin, Shanghai, Tokyo or Nepal, each unit you complete counts towards your LLM. Additional costs may be involved. See page 22 for details.

Complete units of study taught by external international and domestic experts

Units are taught by our own academic staff and visiting international and domestic experts from other institutions and the legal profession.

Complete the graduate diploma and upgrade to the master's degree

If you are not ready to commit to undertaking the LLM but have a law degree and an interest in studying our coursework units, you can start with a Graduate Diploma in Law, which consists of four units of study. On completion, and with approval, you may transfer to the master's degree, which requires a further four units of study.

Structure

Master of Laws (LLM)

- Credit points required to complete: 48 (eight units of study), including at least one capstone unit which consists of a research essay (7000-10,000 words)
- The minimum course duration is one year for full-time candidates and two years for part-time candidates.

Graduate Diploma in Law (GradDipLaw)

- Credit points required to complete: 24 (four units of study)
- The minimum course duration for the GradDipLaw is six months for full-time candidates and one year for part-time candidates.
- If you hold a Diploma in Law (DipLaw) from the Legal Profession Admission Board of NSW, you are eligible to apply for this qualification and, with approval, transfer to complete the LLM.

Units of study

If you are enrolled in the LLM or the GradDipLaw, you can choose the prescribed number of units of study from the entire range of units offered through the Sydney Law School postgraduate coursework program. This means you can either specialise in one area or combine your interests in a number of fields.

For an up-to-date list of the units of study currently available through this program, visit:

- sydney.edu.au/courses

Admission criteria

To be eligible for admission to the LLM, you need:

- a Bachelor of Laws (LLB) or Juris Doctor (JD) with a credit average or an equivalent qualification or
- completion of the requirements of the embedded graduate diploma with a credit average or equivalent qualification.

To be eligible for the graduate diploma, you need a LLB or JD, or an equivalent qualification.

INSIDE VIEW

Our students and graduates share benefits of their University of Sydney experience.

Weeraya Prompiriya
Master of Laws

“Sydney Law School’s international reputation for corporate and commercial law influenced my decision to enrol in the Master of Laws. I was able to choose the units of study and organise the course to meet my professional needs.

“This course has improved my critical thinking skills by providing me with a chance to discuss and exchange ideas with other students from various backgrounds. Studying at Sydney has had a significant impact on my career.

“I have gained knowledge in new practice areas, helping me to develop my professional goals.”

Tharani Dharmaraj
Master of Laws
Senior Associate, Baker McKenzie, Sydney

“The Sydney LLM allowed me to gain an in-depth understanding in a broad range of subjects. They are related to both the areas in which I practise day to day and others that I don’t get involved in regularly, to help me gain more knowledge and familiarity with them.

“While it may be challenging to juggle work and study (along with many other commitments that you may have), it is definitely a rewarding experience. It will give you more confidence in the workplace and is a worthwhile investment in your professional development.”

Mitchell Kelly
Master of Laws

“I chose Sydney Law School for its reputation as a leading international law school. I wanted to be surrounded by the best and brightest. As a corporate lawyer, it was important for me to be studying with other like-minded people, and on day one I experienced this.

“In my classes I was able to engage and collaborate with peers and teachers who were passionate about the law, actively working in the legal profession and experts in their chosen field. A recent career highlight was being shortlisted as a finalist in the 2017 Lawyers Weekly ‘30 Under 30’ awards for mergers and acquisitions.”

MASTER OF BUSINESS LAW GRADUATE DIPLOMA IN BUSINESS LAW

Choose from the entire range of units of study offered through Sydney Law School's commercial law, corporate, securities and finance law, international business law, and Australian and international taxation programs, with this specialist qualification in business law and regulation.

This degree reflects the growing importance of legal literacy and business law expertise among non-lawyers working in business, finance, commercial and corporate environments. It also provides a qualification that builds on the completion of professional accountancy qualification.

You can choose from up to 70 units of study in any given year – one of the largest choices of any master's by coursework program at Sydney Law School. If you choose to enrol in Master of Taxation units, you will need to complete the unit Introduction to Australian Business Tax and/or any other prerequisites.

Students who do not hold a law degree from a common law jurisdiction will be required to complete the units Legal Reasoning and the Common Law System.

Structure

Master of Business Law

- Credit points required to complete: 48 (eight units of study)

MASTER OF HEALTH LAW GRADUATE DIPLOMA IN HEALTH LAW

Sydney Law School offers one of the nation's leading postgraduate programs in health and medical law.

The Master of Health Law (MHL) is a flexible, specialist qualification covering wide-ranging legal and ethical issues in healthcare. You will learn to identify, analyse and develop solutions to complex legal, ethical and policy issues affecting health and health services.

Our students come from a wide range of disciplinary backgrounds. They include practising lawyers, health professionals, health administrators, government officers, health advocates and others seeking a deeper understanding of legal and regulatory issues arising within the health sector.

The core and elective units of study cover a wide range of areas, including healthcare law, the impact of new technologies on healthcare, the regulation of the health professions, litigation and dispute resolution, public health law, mental health law, and global health law and governance.

“The Master of Health Law at Sydney Law School was uniquely interdisciplinary. It gave me the opportunity to collaborate with students from medical, healthcare, research and social science backgrounds. I benefited from the diverse insights of a peer group comprising different ages, interests and professional experience.

“We had some fantastic international teaching staff. I took a unit taught by Professor Lawrence (Larry) Gostin of Georgetown University in Washington, DC, a leading authority on global health law.”

MASTER OF ENVIRONMENTAL LAW GRADUATE DIPLOMA IN ENVIRONMENTAL LAW

This unique and innovative program involves study across the fields of science and law. You will explore and analyse contemporary issues in climate and environmental law.

Climate and environmental law form one of the law's most rapidly expanding areas of specialisation. At Sydney Law School, you will find a wide variety of units available in the study of this field.

The program is designed to meet the needs of environmental specialists from both Australia and overseas. Non-lawyers working or wishing to work in the environmental field are also welcome to apply to enrol in the program.

This program also offers opportunities to undertake units from other related disciplines and abroad through, for instance, the Sydney Law School in Europe program (see page 22).

Structure

Master of Environmental Law

- Credit points required to complete: 48 (eight units of study)
- Completion of the core unit Environmental Law and Policy, and six to seven electives chosen from the range of relevant units on offer. Students without a law degree need to complete the unit Legal Reasoning and the Common Law System.

Graduate Diploma in Environmental Law

- Credit points required to complete: 24 (four units of study)
- Completion of the core unit Environmental Law and Policy, and two-to-three electives chosen from the range of relevant units on offer. If you do not have a law degree, you will need to complete the unit Legal Reasoning and the Common Law System.

“Postgraduate studies at Sydney Law School provided me with the opportunity to academically apply more than 10 years professional experience in sustainable development and environmental protection. The research I did for two major research projects has since been published in the International Journal of Marine and Coastal Law and the Journal of International Wildlife Law and Policy. The Master of Environmental Law provided me with the platform to become a scholar in international environmental law, while also strengthening my professional profile, particularly at the international level.”

Kimberley Graham
Master of Environmental Law

MASTER OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW AND POLICY

Develop your understanding of the relationship between the law and implementation of public policy by examining the values inherent in administrative law and those of public administration, together with the practical aspects of applying the law.

This program offers the opportunity for public administrators, lawyers and policy analysts to learn together across law, government and social policy. It also provides an understanding of public policy objectives and methodological approaches to analysing the social and economic effects of reforms.

This degree offers unique content and delivery. You can complement your law units with study through the University's Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences and our School of Education and Social Work.

Structure

- Credit points required to complete: 48 (eight units of study)
- Completion of three core units: Administrative Law, Public Policy, and Policy Making, Power and Politics (offered by the Department of Government and International Relations).

MASTER OF CRIMINOLOGY GRADUATE DIPLOMA IN CRIMINOLOGY

Taught by some of Australia's leading criminologists, this master's degree will provide you with a critical understanding of criminology.

Designed for anyone with an interest in crime, punishment and criminal justice, the program addresses contemporary questions about crime and control within theoretical and policy contexts, exploring crime in modern Australia and comparing it with a wide range of local and global community concerns. We welcome students from social sciences, research and social policy backgrounds.

Our face-to-face classes are led by experts in criminal law, criminal justice policy, juvenile and restorative justice, forensic psychology, crime and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander issues, international and comparative criminal justice and policing. This course recognises the importance of research, policy and applied learning.

We will equip you for work with public and private criminal justice and social welfare agencies, with a focus on psychology and psychiatry, public policy, social research and legal practice.

Structure*

Master of Criminology

- Credit points required to complete: 48 (eight units of study)
- The program includes three core units of study: Crime Research and Policy, Explaining Crime, and Criminal Liability (students with a law degree are exempt from Criminal Liability). # MASTER OF LABOUR LAW AND RELATIONS

This is a sought-after qualification that merges the expertise of Sydney Law School with the discipline of Work and Organisational Studies (part of the University of Sydney Business School) and the Department of Political Economy.

If you are a lawyer or other professional working in the human resources field in government, business, industry or private practice, you will find this interdisciplinary master's degree an invaluable professional training experience.

Structure

- Credit points required to complete: 48 (eight units of study)
- The Master of Labour Law and Relations requires completion of two compulsory units of study: Labour Law and Industrial Relations Policy.
- Students without a law degree need to complete the unit of study Legal Reasoning and the Common Law System, and at least three units from the list of core units.
- Students with a law degree need to complete at least four units from the list of core units, in addition to the two compulsory units.
- All students need to complete at least 24 (up to 42) credit points from Sydney Law School, chosen from the range of units on offer.

CONTINUING PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

We offer a range of flexible options to meet your requirements, from semester-length and intensive units of study, with or without assessment, to local and overseas lectures, seminars and conferences.

Semester-length units are taught one evening a week, from 6 to 8pm for 13 weeks. Intensive units are generally taught over four or five full days, from 9am to 5pm (these days might be in a single block or spread over the semester).

Single-unit study without assessment

This study option allows you to attend lectures, receive reading materials and access the unit's e-learning website.

You do not need to undertake assignments or examinations. You will not receive a formal University of Sydney grade, academic transcript or credit towards future award courses.

To find out more, please visit:

– sydney.edu.au/law/cpd/your-options/study-without-assessment.shtml

For more information, please email: law.events@sydney.edu.au

Single-unit study with assessment

If you are seeking accreditation towards a degree (for which you need to complete formal assessment tasks), then you should apply for single-unit study with assessment.

If you successfully complete the units of study and their assessments, you may count up to 12 credit points (two units of study) of the relevant units towards your full degree if you subsequently enrol in that degree.

To find out more, please visit:

RESEARCH

At the University of Sydney we are tripling our investment in research by 2020 to change the way we think about the world and how we live and work in it.

We are one of the world's top research universities and a member of Australia's prestigious Group of Eight network and the Association of Pacific Rim Universities. This association partners us with other institutions that excel in research, including Stanford, UCLA, Shanghai Jiao Tong University and the University of Hong Kong.

Our research is shaped by the big picture. We look at real-world problems from all angles, combining the expertise and talents of scholars from many disciplines.

This collaborative spirit drives our interdisciplinary research centres, including several dedicated to deepening our understanding of China and Southeast Asia, and increasing Australia's engagement in these regions. We're home to more than 90 research and teaching centres and we have a proud track record of excellence. The Australian Government ranked all of our research at world standard or above in its latest Excellence in Research for Australia ratings.

Find out more about our current research:

“With leading experts in my field, excellent support for HDR students and its appealing location, undertaking my PhD at Sydney was an easy choice.

“I was fortunate to receive several scholarships and a research grant. I was able to present my research at local and international conferences, gaining feedback from influential scholars.

“After graduating, I secured a full-time academic position at Sydney Law School. I currently teach Legal Research and Criminal Law – both areas related to my PhD.”

CENTRES AND INSTITUTES

Sydney Law School has eight research centres and institutes that inform and reflect our postgraduate coursework and research programs. They provide a conduit for specialist knowledge for all audiences, including the academic and professional community as well as the general public.

Australian Centre for Climate and Environmental Law

This centre is renowned for interdisciplinary research, education and public engagement. Experts in the legal profession contribute to teaching, seminar programs and research activities.

– sydney.edu.au/law/accel

Centre for Asian and Pacific Law

This is a leading centre for the teaching and research of law and legal systems in the Asia-Pacific region. Members have legal expertise in a wide variety of jurisdictions, particularly China, Japan, Indonesia and Malaysia.

– sydney.edu.au/law/caplus

Sydney Health Law

Our focal point for health law research, teaching and community engagement. It builds on two decades of excellence in teaching and research across all areas of health law.

– sydney.edu.au/law/health

Sydney Institute of Criminology

This is an internationally recognised research centre of criminological, criminal law and criminal justice expertise. Members analyse contemporary practice and policy, with a focus on social justice and law reform.

– sydney.edu.au/law/criminology

Julius Stone Institute of Jurisprudence

This institute continues Sydney Law School's strong leadership in this field, and recognises, honours and celebrates Professor Julius Stone's outstanding contribution to legal scholarship.

– sydney.edu.au/law/jurisprudence

Ross Parsons Centre for Commercial, Corporate and Taxation Law

This centre engages in high-level research in commercial, corporate and taxation law. They organise conferences and seminars, publications, visits from international and Australian academics, and links with other institutions.

– sydney.edu.au/law/parsons

Sydney Centre for International Law

This is a centre of excellence in research, public policy and teaching in international law. Since its establishment in 2003, the centre has emerged as a hub of international legal thought and debate in the Asia-Pacific region.

– sydney.edu.au/law/scil

Constitutional Reform Unit

This unit draws on scholarship across the University to provide expert analysis to the public and the media on constitutional reform proposals, and to raise the level of public debate on such issues in Australia.

HOW TO APPLY: COMBINED LAW

Domestic applicants

Apply through the Universities Admissions Centre (UAC).

- www.uac.edu.au

Admission to a Combined Law (LLB) degree in 2019 is guaranteed if you achieve an Australian Tertiary Admission Rank (ATAR) of at least 99.5, or an International Baccalaureate (IB) score of at least 43 (or an accepted equivalent secondary qualification), and meet any prerequisites for the course.

For more information, visit:

- sydney.edu.au/study/admission-criteria

International applicants

There are three ways to apply:

- direct application to the University of Sydney
- apply through a University representative/agent
- apply through UAC.

To find out more, visit our website:

- sydney.edu.au/study/how-to-apply

Admission to a Combined Law (LLB) degree in 2019 requires that you achieve an Australian Tertiary Admission Rank (ATAR) of at least 95.5, or International Baccalaureate (IB) score of at least 37, or a score of at least 8 in the University of Sydney Foundation Program.

- sydney.edu.au/foundationprogram

We also accept equivalent secondary qualifications from overseas. For more details, visit:

- sydney.edu.au/study/secondary-qualifications

English language requirements

If you did not complete senior secondary studies in English, you need to meet a certain level of English language proficiency. You can demonstrate your proficiency with a test such as IELTS, TOEFL or PTE. For details, see:

- sydney.edu.au/study/english-reqs

Transfer

If you do not reach the guaranteed ATAR for Combined Law, you may be able to join the program later through a transfer after you complete a period of study at any university, including Sydney.

We assess domestic and international students according to either their tertiary grades (if they have studied at that level for at least one year full time), or secondary qualifications, whichever is higher. If you transfer after second year, it may be difficult to complete the Combined Law program in five years. In this case, you may wish to consider the Juris Doctor after completing your first degree.

Current University of Sydney students can apply directly to the University online. External students can apply through UAC.

Please see:

- sydney.edu.au/study/transfer-course

- sydney.edu.au/study/credit

HOW TO APPLY: JURIS DOCTOR

Domestic and international applicants

To apply for admission to the Juris Doctor, you need to have a bachelor's degree in another discipline.

Admission is competitive and we assess applicants on their previous academic performance alone: 25 percent is based on your ATAR or equivalent; and 75 percent on your grade point average of a previous tertiary degree. (If you have more than one degree, your higher grade point average will be used.)

We also welcome applicants who have completed a research degree, a master's degree by coursework or an honours degree. If you do not have an ATAR or equivalent, you will be assessed on your tertiary record alone.

English language requirements (international applicants)

To apply for the Juris Doctor, you need one of the following:

- an IELTS score of 7.5, with no band below 7.0
- a TOEFL score of 615, plus a TWE of 5
- IBT of 105, with a minimum of 25 in the writing section and 23 in all other sections
- an overall PTE score of 76, with no score section below 68.

For more information:

- sydney.edu.au/study/english-reqs

Accelerated program for law graduates from other jurisdictions

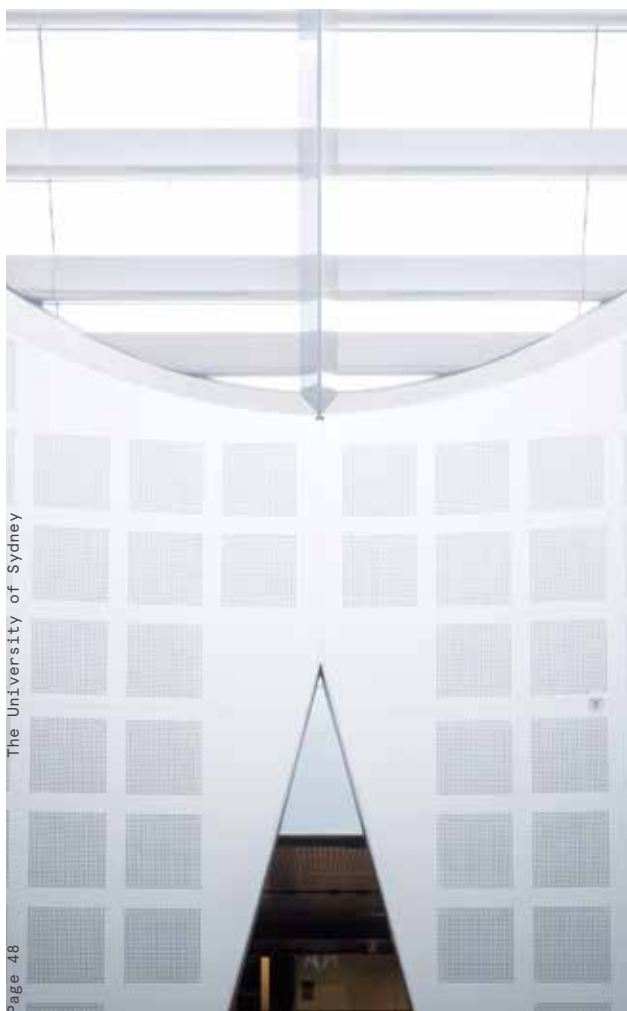

If you have completed a law degree from a non-common law jurisdiction, you may receive credit of up to 42 credit points.

You will receive unspecified credit of 36 credit points and may also receive a further 6 credit points when you enrol, if you can provide evidence that you have completed the equivalent of one unit of study in jurisprudence.

Transfer from another Juris Doctor

If you have completed one year or equivalent of a Juris Doctor program at another institution, you will be assessed on the grade point average of your first-year JD studies. You may gain credit for the year you have studied; however, we will determine this at enrolment. We cannot consider you for admission if you have completed more than one year of a Juris Doctor at another institution.

To apply for one of the limited Commonwealth supported places, you need a distinction average (domestic applicants only). To apply for a full-fee place, you need a credit average.

Transfer from full-fee place to Commonwealth-supported place (domestic applicants only)

If you accept a full-fee place in the Juris Doctor, you can reapply in subsequent years for one of the limited Commonwealth-supported places after you have completed at least one year (48 credit points) or equivalent. Assessment is based on your grade point average for your first and any subsequent years. You need a distinction average.

Special Consideration for Admission scheme (domestic applicants only)

If you have a lower ATAR or equivalent, need to explain a poor secondary school record, or believe that your previous tertiary studies have been seriously affected by misadventure, illness or other compelling circumstances, you may be eligible for the Special Consideration for Admission scheme.

Please submit your explanation and supporting documents online.

Learn more about this scheme:

- sydney.edu.au/study/admission-pathways

Cadigal Program

The Cadigal Program is an admission and academic support scheme for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander applicants. If you are interested in applying for consideration under this program, please visit:

- sydney.edu.au/cadigal

Domestic applicants

Domestic students can apply for a domestic full-fee place (UAC code: 980205) and/or a Commonwealth supported place (UAC code: 980200). Offers are made on a rolling basis via UAC and will commence in September. Accepting an earlier offer from another law school will not affect your Sydney JD application. You will still receive an offer if you are eligible. Accepting a fee offer from Sydney does not affect your CSP preference. You will be assessed if places are still available in later rounds. Apply through the University Admissions Centre (UAC) website:

- www.uac.edu.au

Applications for 2019 open in September 2018.

International applicants

You can apply for admission to the Juris Doctor either online or through a University of Sydney representative (agent) in Australia or overseas.

You will need the course code and the CRICOS code:

- Juris Doctor course code: MAJURDOC-01
- Juris Doctor CRICOS code: 071754C

Apply to the University of Sydney:

- sydney.edu.au/courses/juris-doctor

Apply through a University of Sydney representative:

- sydney.edu.au/study/overseas-agents

HOW TO APPLY: POSTGRADUATE AND RESEARCH

Admission criteria and how to apply

For admission to the Master of Laws or the Graduate Diploma in Laws, you need to have a Bachelor of Laws or Juris Doctor from the University of Sydney or an equivalent qualification.

For admission to specialist law degrees, you need a bachelor's degree (in any discipline) from the University of Sydney or equivalent qualification.

- Find your course at sydney.edu.au/courses
- Make sure you meet the admission criteria, including academic and, for international applicants, English language requirements.
- Click the 'apply now' button.

We strongly encourage you to apply as early as possible, as offers are made on a rolling basis.

Applications for enrolment in the University of Sydney Law School intensive units will be accepted all year round from eligible applicants.

Closing dates – coursework applications

- 31 January 2019 for Semester 1 courses commencing in February 2019
- 30 June 2019 for Semester 2 courses commencing in August 2019

Domestic and international research applicants

Before applying to undertake a program of postgraduate research, you need to ensure you are academically qualified. The minimum academic qualifications required for entry to a postgraduate research degree are one of the following:

Doctor of Philosophy

A master's degree, or a bachelor's degree with first class or second-class honours from the University of Sydney (or equivalent qualification).

Master of Laws by research

A Bachelor of Laws with first-class or second class honours from the University of Sydney (or equivalent qualification).

Master of Criminology by research

A bachelor's degree with first-class or second class honours from the University of Sydney (or equivalent qualification).

Please note you may be admitted to a research program based on qualifications that the Postgraduate Research Committee considers equivalent to an honours degree.

Research and publication experience

You need to show satisfactory evidence of research training and of your ability to complete the proposed research program within the minimum period of time. You may demonstrate this through the successful completion of a sustained piece of research for an earlier degree, sustained research in a professional capacity, scholarly publications or experience in some other research related endeavour.

There are two stages involved in applying to a research program.

Stage 1: Expression of Interest (pre-application)

Before making a formal application, you need to complete an Expression of Interest form detailing your area of intended research, academic qualifications, professional or other qualifications, original research activities and publications, and any other information relevant to the application. The form is available at:

– sydney.edu.au/courses

You need to submit your Expression of Interest at least three months before the official closing date. If your Expression of Interest is accepted, you will be advised of your eligibility to proceed to making a formal application (Stage 2).

Stage 2: Formal application for admission

Complete the Application for Admission form available at:

– sydney.edu.au/courses

Closing dates – research applications (including course transfers)

We need to receive your application by:

- 31 December for Research Period 2 (begins 1 March)
- 30 April for Research Period 3 (begins 1 July).

We accept applications at any time up to the prescribed due date. If your application is not assessed in time, we will automatically consider it for the next course commencement date. Please submit your application online at:

– sydney.edu.au/courses

Supporting documents
