You don't need to resort to derivative contracts to take a large position in a stock. Targeting stocks under $10 a share allows investors to control a larger number of shares with the same pool of investment dollars. But all low-priced stocks are not created equal. Some low priced stocks are "cheap" for a good reason while others just look attractive. And fact is, many of the best high-quality, low-priced stocks are flying under Wall Street's radar.

For your further consideration, TheStreet Ratings screened the universe of stocks and selected the 20 best investment candidates currently trading at a share price under $10 and earned a grade of A- or better.

All these low priced stocks have earned a 'Buy' recommendation, based on ratings from TheStreet Ratings' unbiased stock model.
