DIETARY SUPPLEMENTS/PRODUCTS CONTAINING DMAA

Dietary Supplement Products Containing DMAA

Products containing DMAA are legal in the U.S., but the Army is conducting a scientific review of their safety. As such, HPRC maintains this list of currently available commercial products that contain DMAA (listed on the product label or website by that or one of the other names that have been used synonymously; see below). The list is accurate as of the time of compiling, although some manufacturers have already modified their products to exclude DMAA or have removed their DMAA-containing products altogether, and others may do so in the future. The list likely does not include all products available.

Some retailers still have stock of products that contain DMAA, and newer, non-DMAA versions sometimes have the same product name. So it is important to read ingredient labels carefully before using any product, especially those promoted for bodybuilding and weight loss (and party pills).

Many manufacturers clearly identify the "geranium extract" or "geranium oil extract" in their products as 1,3-dimethylamylamine or one of its other equivalent chemical names. For those that do not, however, we have no way to determine whether the "geranium (oil) extract" identified on the label is a different—possibly natural—product or some form of synthetic DMAA. The only way to determine positively if a product does or does not contain DMAA is through laboratory testing, so HPRC recommends using only dietary supplements that have evidence of third-party testing by a reputable independent laboratory.

In checking labels, you need to know the numerous terms/synonyms for DMAA. The most common ones are 1,3-dimethylamine; methylhexaneamine or MHA; dimethylpentylamine or DMP; 4-methylhexan-2-amine; Geranamine; and geranium oil, extract, or stems and leaves. Below is a list of various terms that could appear on a Supplement Facts label of a product containind DMAA:

- 1,3-dimethylamylamine
- 1,3-dimethylpentylamine
- 2-amino-4-methylhexane
- 2-hexanamine,4-methyl-(9Cl)
- 4-methyl-2-hexanamine
- 4-methyl-2-hexylamine
- 4-methylhexan-2-amine (IUPAC)
- C7H17N (chemical formula)
- CAS 105-41-9
- Crane's bill extract 200:1 (misnomer; not necessarily DMAA)

- dimethylamylamine (DMAA)
- dimethylpentylamine (DMP)
- DMAA
- Floradrene
- Forthan
- Forthane
- Fouramin
- Geranamine (Proviant™)
- GeranaX
- · Geranium extract
- Geranium flower extract

- Geranium oil
- · Geranium oil extract
- · Geranium stems and leaves
- Metexaminum
- Methexaminum
- · Methylhexanamine
- Methylhexaneamine (MHA)
- · Pelargonium (various)
- Pentylamine
- synthetic geranium

NOTE: Dietary supplements containing DMAA have been placed on medical hold by the DoD due to concerns about related adverse health effects and are currently not for sale on military installations.

⇒ HPRC periodically updates this list, so be sure to check back for newer versions.

The Natural Medicines Comprehensive Database (NMCD) also has a list of dietary supplements that contain DMAA. This user-friendly database is available for both Warfighters and healthcare professionals who have a ".mil" email address through links on the HPRC website. Choose the appropriate version and follow the instructions to create an account. To view NMCD's list of products containing DMAA, log on, type "DMAA" in the keyword search box and then click on the link that says "View 273 Products Containing: DMAA (DIMETHYLAMYLAMINE)." Note that NMCD provides safety ratings for most of these dietary supplement products.

&lt;sup>†</sup> Party pills represent a different category of DMAA-containing products; they are not considered dietary supplements, as they are marketed solely for recreational use, so we are now listing them under a separate heading. The use of DMAA in party pills led to its ban in New Zealand.
