1.0 Introduction

1.1 Background to the Post -2015 Process in Kenya

World leaders congregating at the Millennium Summit in the year 2000 adopted the Millennium Declaration. The declaration recognized the need for a collective responsibility to work toward a more peaceful, prosperous and just world. Following the Declaration, a set of 8 goals was agreed upon as a framework of reference for the world's main development challenges. These were;

1. Eradicate extreme poverty and hunger.
2. Achieve Universal Primary education.
3. Promote gender equality and empower women.
4. Reduce child mortality
5. Improve maternal health.
6. Combat HIV and AIDS, malaria and other diseases.
7. Ensure environmental sustainability.
8. Develop a global partnership for development.

The set of 8 goals were to be achieved by all countries by the year 2015 and were accompanied by a set of 21 targets and 60 indicators for monitoring progress. By the year 2005, the MDGs had gained traction and become a key organizing principle for a large number of development actors.

The MDGs Process in Kenya began in 2004 when the national stakeholder's forum was held to chart the way forward for the MDGs process in the country. By then the process was largely led by the United Nations through the UNDP Kenya Country Office partly because there was limited knowledge on the MDGs in the country. A national MDGs focal point was established within the Ministry of Devolution and Planning (then Ministry of Planning and National Development) to lead in the MDGs process in the country. In Kenya, the MDGs have since 2004 progressively become a central basis for policy, planning and budgeting in government.

From 2000 to 2005 a lot of efforts were dedicated to advocacy and sensitization of various development stakeholders. This started with senior government officers charged with policy making, planning and budgeting where economists and finance officers in government ministries were sensitized on the Millennium Development Goals. The sensitization on MDG based planning and budgeting was later extended to heads of departments in the key sectors of the MDGs, provincial heads of departments and heads of departments at the district level.

The Sensitization process also focused on the civil society organizations. The MDGs National Focal Point partners with various civil society organizations to localize MDGs at the grassroots levels. For the general public, the awareness took the form of MDGs messages translated into vernacular languages as well as periodic documentaries. These were broadcasted using both print media and electronic media. Opinion leaders and committee members of the various devolved funds were also sensitized. The private sector was encouraged to allocate more of their corporate social responsibility resources and other contributions to priority areas for the MDGs.

Members of parliament, chief officers and civic leaders from the various local authorities were also sensitized to ensure they influence the allocation of more budgetary resources to MDGs sectors. Members of Parliament were specifically targeted because of their oversight role in the budget making processes.

The targeting was to ensure that all development actors, particularly those who have a strong influence on development resources were adequately sensitized on the MDGs process. As a result of the sensitization, the MDGs became part of the development dialogue in many forums hence their attainment were a priority for Government, Private sector, civil society, development partners and the general public. Advocacy and sensitization still continue although the MDGs are well known and prioritized.

The period 2005 to 2010 was focused on the implementation of the MDGs. The government developed the Vision 2030 and its first Medium Term Plan (MTP) 2008-2012. This medium term strategy prioritized the MDGs in to the government development agenda. During this period the government issued a cabinet memo which directed all government Ministries, Departments and Agencies to Mainstream MDGs into their policy, planning and budgeting. This period was characterized by increased government budgetary allocations towards the MDGs especially to primary education, child and maternal health care. A great proportion of the constituency development funds (CDF) was also invested in projects that are responsive to the MDGs such as the construction of new health facilities, schools and girls' boarding facilities in secondary schools. The private sector, through their corporate social responsibility operations also contributed significantly to the social sectors such as health, education, water and environmental conservation. Various private sector organizations partnered with public agencies in the rehabilitation of the water towers and electronic waste management programmes. The gains made in the MDGs targets during this period were attributed to government efforts, complemented by those of civil society organizations and other development partners.

In the third and final trimester of the MDGs period i.e. 2010-2015, the focus has been on the fast tracking and acceleration of the off-track MDG targets in the country. So far the country is on track towards the achievement of universal primary education and the combating of HIV and AIDs, malaria and tuberculosis. On gender equality, the country has already achieved gender parity at the primary school level, although inequalities still exist at secondary and tertiary levels. Owing to the constitutional provision for special women's seats in Parliament and Senate, the total number of women parliamentarians increased to 87 (approximately 20%) in 2012. However, the proportion of women who have been competitively elected declined at the last general elections. Lately, the government has removed all charges on maternal services as a way to boosting the both child and maternal care. Immunization coverage has also been expanding nationwide, hence reduction in child mortality.

The country has also made encouraging progress toward environmental sustainability with the increasing forest cover and also improving access to drinking water and sanitation. With the rapid urbanization, achieving improvement in the lives of slum dwellers remains a challenge. In goal 8, the country has achieved very high numbers of internet and mobile telephone users. The development of information and communication technologies has also brought with it additional benefits such as mobile money transfer and mobile banking as well as employment opportunities in the development of mobile phone and internet applications and whose beneficiaries are the youth. With all the current and previous interventions, Kenya may register more progress on some of the MDG targets by 2015.

2.0 The Post 2015 Development Agenda

With less than two years to the end of the period allocated for countries to achieve the MDG targets, there has been a remarkable achievement in the indicators of some of the MDG targets, while progress of others is still slow. As the year 2015 draws closer, Kenya like most developing countries is keen to ensure that they adequately participate in any development agenda that may be adopted by the world. The country has been participating in various Post-2015 processes internationally and has also been leading a national process of formulating its own position on the post 2015 development agenda.

2.1 The National Consultation Process

The Ministry of Devolution and Planning, in collaboration with UNDP Kenya, the Republic of Finland, through its embassy in Nairobi and other stakeholders began consultations on the Post-2015 agenda in the year 2012. After the first consultation meeting held in September 2012 to chart the path for the Post-2015 dialogue, several consultations have been made at both county and national level and with the participation of a wide array of stakeholders, key among them government ministries, development partners and civil society organizations.

2.2 County Consultations

The Ministry of Devolution and Planning convened Post 2015 dialogues in 12 counties; Nairobi, Kakamega, Murang'a, Kitui, Garissa, Migori, Kisumu, Kajiado, Siaya, Kilifi, Tharaka Nithi and Turkana. The objective of these dialogues was to amplify the voices of the vulnerable and marginalized in society and ensure its inclusion in the future global development framework. Participation at the County dialogues included more than 380 participants comprising of grass root community groups, youth, men and women groups, CSOs, professionals, community representatives of school and health facility management committees and persons with special needs as well as government officers at the County level.

2.2.1 Methodology of the Consultations

The participants were given a briefing on the MDGs, and the performance of indicators for various targets as drawn from the five MDGs Status Reports published biennially since the year 2003. These set the basis for discussion on the Post-2015 period. The starting point was on the need to take stock of the MDGs since the year 2000 in order to discuss on the likely shape of the framework that would succeed the MDGs after 2015.

Participant discussed the MDGs and the post-2015 agenda along five thematic areas of:

1. Agriculture and food security,
2. Employment and enterprise,
3. Health,
4. Universal education and gender
5. Environment

The groups identified county-specific challenges in achieving MDGs under respective thematic areas, identified areas/interventions of priority that can accelerate achievement of the MDGs and recommended what they felt should be included in the post 2015 development agenda.

The identified priority areas were:

2.2.1.1 Agriculture and food security

Under this thematic area, the following were recommended: strengthening of resilience and provision of safety nets, address land tenure, promotion of modern and safe agricultural production technologies, social protection for the old and improving the marketing chains were identified as priority areas for inclusion in the post 2015 agenda.

2.2.2.2 Employment and Enterprise

Identified under this theme were; job creation especially for the youth (who are a majority of Kenya's population) and women, enhancing peace and security so as to have an enabling environment for business, good governance and leadership as well as industrialization to create job opportunities.

2.2.2.3 Education and Gender

Under this theme, participants appreciated that there have been gains in enrolment especially at primary school level. However quality of education and people with special needs were identified as the areas missing out in the current MDGs framework. Inclusion of Early Childhood Development and Education (ECDE) in universal education, addressing negative cultural issues and peace and security were also raised.

2.2.2.4 Health

For the health sector, participants suggested the addition of the following aspects

Equitable distribution of health resources (finances, human, facilities and services)
Non-Communicable Diseases (Cancer, Diabetes, high blood pressure) and Social protection for the older persons and people with special needs were identified.

2.2.2.5 Environment

In the environment sector, the conservation of natural resources and the effects of climate change came out as strong recommendations.

2.2.3 Key Recommendations from County Consultations

The following is a summary of the key recommendations of the county consultations are;

1. Fast tracking and accelerating the gains made on current MDGs to continue;
 2. Employment creation especially for the youth and women;
 3. Address climate change in the post 2015 frame work;
 4. Ensure peace and security;
 5. Provision of social protection;
 6. Address early childhood development and education and quality of education delivered especially in primary schools;
 7. Address the need for real time data and baseline information that is also adequately disaggregated data.
 8. Incorporate resilience measures into the post 2015 development agenda discussions.
- Human rights approach

9. Address retrogressive cultural behavior
10. Establish markets for farm produce and access to finance
11. Preservation of traditional knowledge and skills
12. Inclusion of persons with special needs

2.3 National CSOs Consultations

The Ministry held a consultation forum for National CSOs in June 2013. The forum drew participants from about 54 civil society organizations with programmes in various sectors. There was a CSO representative from the each of the county consultation forums held earlier in April 2013.

Participants were asked to review the current MDGs framework with view to establishing whether it provides adequate focus on the key development priorities. They were also asked to provide recommendations on the key considerations in the design of the new Post-2015 development agenda.

Participants engage in group discussions during the National CSO consultations

The following were identified as the key issues to be considered:

- Traditional knowledge - special reference to traditional medicine
- Infrastructure development
- Inclusion of the needs of persons with disability, the aged and youth
- Need to tackle gender-based violence
- Governance to be considered as either a stand alone goal or target
- Creation of sustainable opportunities , particularly for the youth
- Rights Based approach across all sectors

2.4 National Stakeholders' Consultation

As a culmination of the consultations targeting various stakeholders, the Ministry organized a National Forum on the Post-2015 development agenda. The conference drew participants from government ministries, development partners, civil society organizations, private sector, and representatives of special interest groups, academia and media.

3.0 Recommendations

3.1 Key Gaps in the Current MDGs Framework

The following is a summary of key gaps of the current MDGs framework that emerged from all the consultations held:

1. Inadequate participation in the formulation process of the MDGs. The consultative nature of the Post-2015 dialogue in Kenya was therefore appreciated
2. Strong focus on social sectors reduced the importance attached to investment on infrastructure, agriculture and industrial development.
3. The focus on national averages in reporting has shifted attention away from the inequalities within regions and across gender.
4. The MDGs left out some key issues which have emerged to be of importance to development. These include climate change, conflict, governance, peace and security, disability and old age.

5. Translation of all global goals into nationally applicable targets and policy making was a challenge.
6. Availability of properly disaggregated data for tracking has also been a challenge

3.2 Key Recommendations of the Kenya Post-2015 Consultation Process

The key recommendations for the Post-2015 arising from the above consultations are highlighted below;

3.2.1 Agriculture and Food Security

Ending hunger and malnutrition are key elements of poverty reduction and must remain top priority in the Post-2015 agenda. Kenya continues to experience food insecurity owing to many factors; key among them reduced ability to produce sufficient food to feed its population. At the household level, inadequate incomes hamper access to food from secondary sources. The needs include improved Infrastructure development such as storage facilities and road networks, improvement in market information dissemination, innovations, access to farm inputs e.g. fertilizers and focus on alternative staple foods.

Under this theme, the key recommendations are;

- a. Shift towards climate smart agriculture to reduce vulnerabilities brought about by climate change.
- b. Development of supportive infrastructure and marketing structures

3.2.2 Employment and Enterprise

Unemployment remains a key challenge in Kenya, especially among the youth

Under this theme, the key recommendations include;

- a. Economic growth is vital for the creation of sustainable job opportunities for all
- b. Promotion of agro-based industries to increase incomes earned from agriculture and to increase employment opportunities and improve rural development

Peace and Security emerged as an important for creation of jobs and functioning of industries

3.2.3 Education and Gender

- a. Focus on quality education

- b. Universal access to education for all including those with special needs i.e. PWDs and minorities
- c. Need to address gender based violence
- d. Redefine universal education attainment to include ECDE and post primary education.

3.2.4 Health

- Improve quality of health services especially for the elderly and the disabled
- Improved and equitable accesses to health facilities in all regions of the country
- Implementation of Rights based approach especially to Most at Risk Persons (MARPs), Persons with Disabilities (PWDs), persons with mental health challenges
- Address non-communicable diseases such as cancer, diabetes, high blood pressure and road traffic accidents
- Emphasis on incorporation of traditional knowledge in health
- Maintained focus on maternal and unborn health care

3.2.5 Environment

The Water, Environment and Sanitation sector in Kenya is faced with many challenges. Kenya remains water scarce with significant proportions of the population lacking access to clean water and basic sanitation. The country is also faced with the challenge of degradation of vital natural resources notably forestry resources to satisfy the needs of its growing population.

Key recommendations are

- Implementation of the 10% constitutional requirement on forest cover and planting indigenous trees
- Address waste management in urban and rural areas
- Tackle the adverse effects of climate change
- Increase national capacity for disaster preparedness

3.3 Broad Recommendations

The broad recommendations coming out of the consultations are that Post 2015 Framework considers:

- Economic Growth remains a key requirement for achievement of development aspirations and therefore should be a key focus of the new framework. This should be accompanied by increased regional integration for purposes of market expansion and sharing of new technologies
- Inclusion, empowerment and meaningful active participation of all voices and actors across all sectors including women, grassroots communities, youth, children, persons with disabilities, aged, poor, marginalized and minority groups, and other actors
- Human-Rights approach to development programming
- Equality and equity in the delivery of services
- Tackling the challenges of Rural – Urban migration
- Appreciation and use of local knowledge in the development of solutions to development problems
- Adequate investment in infrastructure development to support all sectors
- Governance- either as a standalone goal or target
- Peace and Security
- Conflict management
- Mainstreaming of old age and disability

For purposes of Monitoring and Evaluation, the new framework should address the need for timely data, adequate disaggregation of data to take care of special interests such as gender, youth and disability. The monitoring and evaluation of the new framework should also be more participatory.

4.0 Conclusion

The national post-2015 consultation process has helped to bring out the views of various stakeholders on the MDGs and the global framework of reference for development challenges that will be followed from the year 2015, when the current MDGs framework comes to an end. There have been positive gains made on MDGs targets such as increase in primary school enrolment, gender parity in enrolment at primary school, reduction of HIV prevalence, and increase in land area under forests as well as growth in information and communication technologies. However, many others are unlikely to be met by 2015.

The dialogues bring out the appreciation that stakeholders have for the millennium development goals and the emerging issues that the new framework should address. The need for economic growth to generate sustainable employment opportunities especially for the youthful populations was seen as key. Youths in Kenya view a youth friendly labor market as a very important feature of the post 2015 period and find it crucial for the country to develop a youth employment agenda informed by the need for decent employment in all sectors, particularly agriculture and involvement of youth in development processes and programmes. The dialogues brought out the need for inclusiveness, equity and equality in the processes designed to ensure the achievement of development aspirations, noting the need to mainstream the needs of those overlooked by the MDGs framework such as persons living with disability and the aged. The post -2015 framework should also address the key issues of governance. Governance plays a pivotal role in the attainment of development aspirations is particularly of importance to Kenya due to the devolution process that came about as a result of the enactment of the Constitution of Kenya 2010.
