

Documenting Electronic Sources: MLA Style

You must document your sources anytime that you use information that is not your own. (See the Library brochure on plagiarism for more information.)

We have created this separate handout for electronic sources because they change frequently. Use the Library brochure, Documenting Sources: MLA Style: For Print and Other Non-Electronic Sources, for all your sources not retrieved online. We have tried to provide the most common examples, but you may need to adapt them to fit your sources, or refer to the MLA Handbook for more complicated sources.

IN-TEXT DOCUMENTATION FORMAT

In general, follow the same rules as for print sources. The basic in-text citation normally includes the author(s) and page(s). The author(s) either appears in the sentence itself (a signal phrase) or at the end of the sentence in parentheses (called parenthetical citation). Most electronic sources do not include page numbers from the original print version. If the source does provide them, page numbers should be at the end of the sentence in parentheses, otherwise use nothing at all.

Basic in-text citation with author signal phrase

Using population statistics as an example, Smith and Ernst argue that homelessness is a condition vastly underestimated, particularly in large metropolitan areas (31).

Basic in-text citation with author's name in parentheses

"The use of foreshadowing throughout the novel keeps the reader intrigued" (Bender, Anderson, and Black 63).

Source with no author and no page numbers

(Note: Use a short form of the title. Titles will be in quotation marks or italicized, depending on how they appear in the works cited list. Ignore initial articles.)

Colonial house plans often included traditional designs and methods ("Architectural").

Indirect source (source within a source) (secondary source with more than three authors)

Taylor has noted "several discrepancies in twin studies of the past" (qtd. in Thomas et al.).

Multiple sources by the same author (short form of title included)

(Note: Titles will be in quotation marks or italicized, depending on how they appear in the works cited list. Ignore initial articles.)

According to Miller, "Genealogical research is both an art and a science" (Ancestor).

A dedicated researcher can literally spend days trying to decipher archived passenger manifests (Miller, "Past" 3).

Online quotation sources

(Note: Use the originator's name in the signal phrase. Include the Web site title in parentheses.)

As the English author, Joseph Addison, said, "Three grand essentials to happiness in this life are something to do, something to love, and something to hope for" (Creative Quotations).

WORKS CITED FORMAT

General Formatting Tips

A works cited list should begin on a new page and be double-spaced. Each entry/citation in the list should be alphabetized by author or editor. If no author, alphabetize by the first word of the title other than A, An, or The. When citing a complete date, all months but May, June, and July are abbreviated. If no date can be found in the source, use n.d. in the citation. If a date range, like 2003-2007, is given, use the most recent date. (Does not apply to edition statements.)

URLs are not required. Include a URL after the access date only if the source cannot be located without it or when your instructor requires it. Example: <<http://ari.org/manuscript/egypt/>>

General Web Sites

MLA style includes the specific title of the section/document on a larger Web site first, then the title of the whole Web site. Magazine and newspaper articles accessed directly (not through a database) are treated as general Web sites. Journals accessed directly are treated as periodicals. (See below.)

Web site with author

Medium. Access date.

Stambaugh, Larry, and Angeline Davies. "Scribe Statues." Ancient Egyptian Art. Art Research Institute, n.d. Web. 1 July 2011.

Organizational Web site with no personal author

"Document Title." Web Site Title. Name of organization associated with the site, Date. Medium. Access date.

"Analyzing the Short Story." Practical Writing. American Association of Literary Academics, 2008. Web. 17 Feb. 2011.

Government Web site with no personal author

United States. Dept. of Health and Human Services. Natl. Inst. of Health. Natl. Inst. of Mental Health. "Bipolar Disorder." National Institute of Mental Health. Natl. Inst. of Mental Health, 2010. Web. 3 Mar. 2011.

Journal and Magazine Articles

Journal and magazine articles are treated differently in MLA style. For help distinguishing between them, ask a librarian or go to <http://www.carrollcc.edu/library/research/citing>. Decide which type of source you have and then follow the appropriate example below.

PDF versions of articles usually do not show the database name which is required. Electronic versions of journals and magazines (except PDF versions) rarely show page numbers. Use the starting page number listed in the citation if that is the case. If no page number can be found, use n. pag.

Journal article with author from a database
