PART FOUR: Essay Questions (10 points each)

Write clearly and legibly. Use complete sentences. Each answer should be anywhere from 1-2 paragraphs long. Fully support all answers with evidence from the text.

31. At one point, Polonius is called a fool by Hamlet. Looking at Polonius's place in this play, the dialogue he provides, and his relationship with other characters, how is this accurate or inaccurate?

-I am looking for the following in this answer:

- Reference to the proverbial lines Polonius speaks
- Mention of Polonius's relationship with the king and place within the kingdom
 - Always present
 - Knows what is going on
 - Gives more insight in his speech than other characters recognize
- Builds dramatic irony by revealing the plot in his riddles

32. What does Hamlet consider in his famous, “To be or not to be” soliloquy? What makes this particular soliloquy the most quoted in all of Shakespeare, in your opinion? Remember to use textual support.

-I am looking for the following in this answer:

- Directly state that Hamlet is considering suicide

- Contemplating whether it is worth continuing in his vengeance or giving up
- Student argument for why this part is remembered
- Textual support

33. What is the purpose of the play-within-a-play? How does this fit into the context of this text?

-I am looking for this for the following answer:

- Statement of purpose of play-within-a-play
- Textual support for why this is the purpose
- How this relates to the play when it was written
 - Forced audience to examine how plays reflect their own life
 - Worry over who would inherit the throne from Elizabeth I because of bloodlines

34. In the beginning of the play, the audience finds out Hamlet plans to feign madness. How does this madness affect him throughout the play? Is it feigned or real?

-I am looking for this for the following answer:

- Feigned madness indicated by prose rather than iambic pentameter
- Prose begins to fade away, even when he does act insane—showing that he can no longer control the madness, it becomes a part of him.
- Textual support for whichever way they try to answer (feigned vs. real).

V. Explanation for modifications

When modifying this test for a student with a learning disability, I reflected on the FAT City video we watched as well as the episode of The Cosby Show. I think it is important for teachers to remember that students with learning disabilities do not have a lower capacity for learning, they just happen to learn and process differently from the norm. For this reason, I chose to rewrite questions that would test close reading in a student without a learning disability, but may confuse a student that does have a learning disability. However, in the essay questions, I did not change my expectations or my wording, because these students can still understand the material and explain their answer. If a student had trouble putting their words into writing, the essay portion could be evaluated verbally. I think that these modifications would make the test more approachable to a student with a learning disability, without assuming that they are not equally as intelligent as other students.
