Half a million American women served in the military during World War II. Their contributions are often obscured. By Mari K. Eder The role of women during World War II was varied, significant and important. In the United States, more than 19 million women during World War II was varied, significant and important. In the United States, more than 19 million women during World War II. the highest generation had a lasting impact. They came from different backgrounds, but together they broke the rules, challenged expectations and perform, blurring the path for future generations. Over time, many of their stories have been faded, were fired or forgotten. Yet the myths surrounding the women of America to war persist. My book, the girls who came out the line: Unspeakable stories of women who have changed the course of World War II, destroys many of them. Here are some examples. Virginia Hall was an American spy who worked undercover in France. (Image Source: Wikimedia Commons) Myth: "Women Weren" TM fighters at war. They only needed support roles. »It is true that women who have served in America's armed services, mainly the army, the Navy guard and the Coast Guard, were in the support. But that didn't necessarily mean they were far from danger. In fact, a woman is particularly well known for her service with the office of strategic services. (OSSS), the CIA precursor and military special operations. Many heard of the Virginia Hall, the ât œspy. "It was more than that. Hall initially wanted to join the diplomatic corps. Despite his linguistic competence, his university degrees and almost a decade of experience in junior administrative roles in several embassies of the United States abroad, was excluded from the growing of the highest service in foreign service. As a woman, the doors of the progress of the taste are not simply closed by her, they were stuck tight. With Europe now at war, the 36-year-old Native Baltimore left his civil service work and volunteered to be an ambulance driver in the French army. After the fall of France in 1940, he fled to Spain. In his way of finding work at the U.S. Embassy in London, he had an ideal meeting on a train with a British intelligence officer recruiting her for the executive of special operations (SOE). After months of training, in August 1941 he was sent undercover in occupied France. Using a variety of code names and passing from one place to another, he helped establish a network of guerrilla fighters who opposed the Nazis at each turn. Room provided and trained maquis fighters, helpedshot down allies evade the capture, disrupted German supply lines and more. After being discovered by the Nazis, she escaped on foot to the snow-capped Pyrenees mountains in Spain. With your cover blown, the SOE was reluctant to send you back to harm. After all he was a civilian and a woman with a disability - she lost a leg during a bird-hunting accident in 1933, while serving at a U.S. consulate in Turkey. Worse Worse It was he would like the gestapo. She instead she joined the American Oss and on a night still without moon in March 1944, Virginia Hall found himself in a nebulistic boat of the torpedo, heading through the canal in France. She had a new disguise: that of a French elderly woman. Gray hair, excess clothing to add weight and limping badge of her completed the disguise: that of a French elderly woman. day, while heading for night operations. The mission of her was simple: interrupt and destroy the capacity of the Nazi to strengthen their troops in the north of France before the next Allied invasion of Normandy. In June 1944, the team had managed to destroy four bridges, derailed freight trains, cut railway lines and telephone lines throughout the region. They also killed over 150 German soldiers and captured at least 500 more. Hall received the distributed distinct of the service for th torture and death» Building direct resistance forces in extraordinary acts ... AGAINST THE NEMY, A & â. ¬ Virginia Hall was An operator - at the tip of the spear. The members of the 6888 Central Postal Battalion, the only army body unit unity of all black women to serve abroad, obtained the movement in Europe when no one else could. (Image: US Army) Myth: à ¢ â,¬ "No commanders were commanders of black women in the Second World War. Carità Adams has become part of the auxiliary body of the women's army in 1942 and graduated In the first class of commissioned officers. He served for two years at Fort Des Moines in Iowa, where he wanted a greater challenge than that of the standard duty at home. He wanted to drive. In the end, it happened. The army had encrypted himself for Assemble a new unit of ADAMS, the 6888 A ° Postal Central Battalion, to solve an unlikely crisis. In 1944, there was a two-year post back to the soldiers, the red cross and civilians who serve in Europe. Simply Wenen is enough postal units. The all black wac unit, known as $\tilde{A} \notin \hat{a}$, \neg å "six triple eight $\tilde{A} \notin \hat{a}$, \neg has been given an apparently impossible mission: simplify the shambolic army mail system. The letters from home were fundamental for gi moralle and the six women at three triple 855 women - the first and only black wac unit to send abroad - should have delivered. When the first contingent arrived. Adams, which was sent forward, was there to meet their ship. Many had been the â €
