Parts of the Scientific Article

- Title briefly states what the article is about.

- Abstract summarizes the whole article.

- Introduction establishes the context for the research: the area in which the research takes place, the research problem, the importance of the research, and the guiding question or hypothesis.

- Materials and Methods describes the research procedure.

- Results reports the outcomes of the research procedure.

- Discussion interprets the results, explaining them and comparing them to the results of other experiments.

- Conclusion focuses the reader on what is important about the research, its contribution to the larger area of study.

- References lists the sources used in the article.