August 2022

23 August is International Day for the Remembrance of the Slave Trade and its Abolition.

This early 19th century bible from the Euing collection held by the University's Archives & Special Collections is unlikely to capture the attention of most casual viewers. However, this is one of only three known copies of what is colloquially known as The Slave Bible, which was created specifically to be used by enslaved people. Sinisterly, certain chapters and verses were excluded, often those dealing with enslavement and liberation from oppression.

The Slave Bible is a compelling illustration of how the rights of enslaved people were suppressed. When confronted with the uncomfortable significance of this edition, the importance of ensuring its availability for teaching and research was recognised. As its condition was poor, and liable to worsen, it was agreed conservation was essential.

With conservation and digitisation now complete it is expected to be on loan as part of an exhibition at Museum Catharijneconvent in Utrecht in early 2023.

August is Health & Safety Month | Psoriasis Awareness Month | Black Business Month (US) | Children's Eye Health & Safety Month | MedicAlert Awareness Month |

CURATING DISCOMFORT

FREDRICK ECK

We know almost nothing about Fredrick Eck, the person who collected the objects in this case. How, and why, did he acquire these things? Were acts of looting involved? The items span the range of his collections, representing colonial connections that probably included material extraction, cultural misrepresentation, and economic exploitation. The significant cultural meaning of these possessions is not immediately clear, making the display very problematic. The box made by the Crown reveals in Northern Provo should be standing, its symbolic representations involve around people's relationship with the sea and it may have been used for ceremonial purposes.

Paintings

Two paintings by Frederick Eck, one of which is a portrait of a woman, possibly a member of the royal family. The other is a landscape painting, possibly of a location in the Caribbean.

MISS NA SMILLIE

The last time we saw her was in 1851. The portrait was made for her by Frederick Eck, who was then in the Caribbean. It is a portrait of a woman, possibly a member of the royal family. The portrait was made for her by Frederick Eck, who was then in the Caribbean.

15 September is International Day of Democracy.

The Hunterian has been involved in a process of Curating Discomfort; looking closely at the collections and our shared histories to understand and transform our role in the University, in Glasgow and in Scotland.

The Hunterian invited a group of six people to form the Community Curators group – Arunima Bhattacharya, Churnjeet Mahn, Esraa Husain, Mary Osei-Oppong, Nelson Cummins and Yvonne Blake.

They are from different geographical backgrounds and have been in Glasgow for different lengths of time. They are academics, community activists, social justice campaigners and educators. They speak to the work of Curating Discomfort as individuals with different interests and priorities.

Over six months, bringing together their individual practice, knowledge and expertise, they operated as a community to curate an intervention in the Museum, establishing new models and narratives around the collection.

October 2022

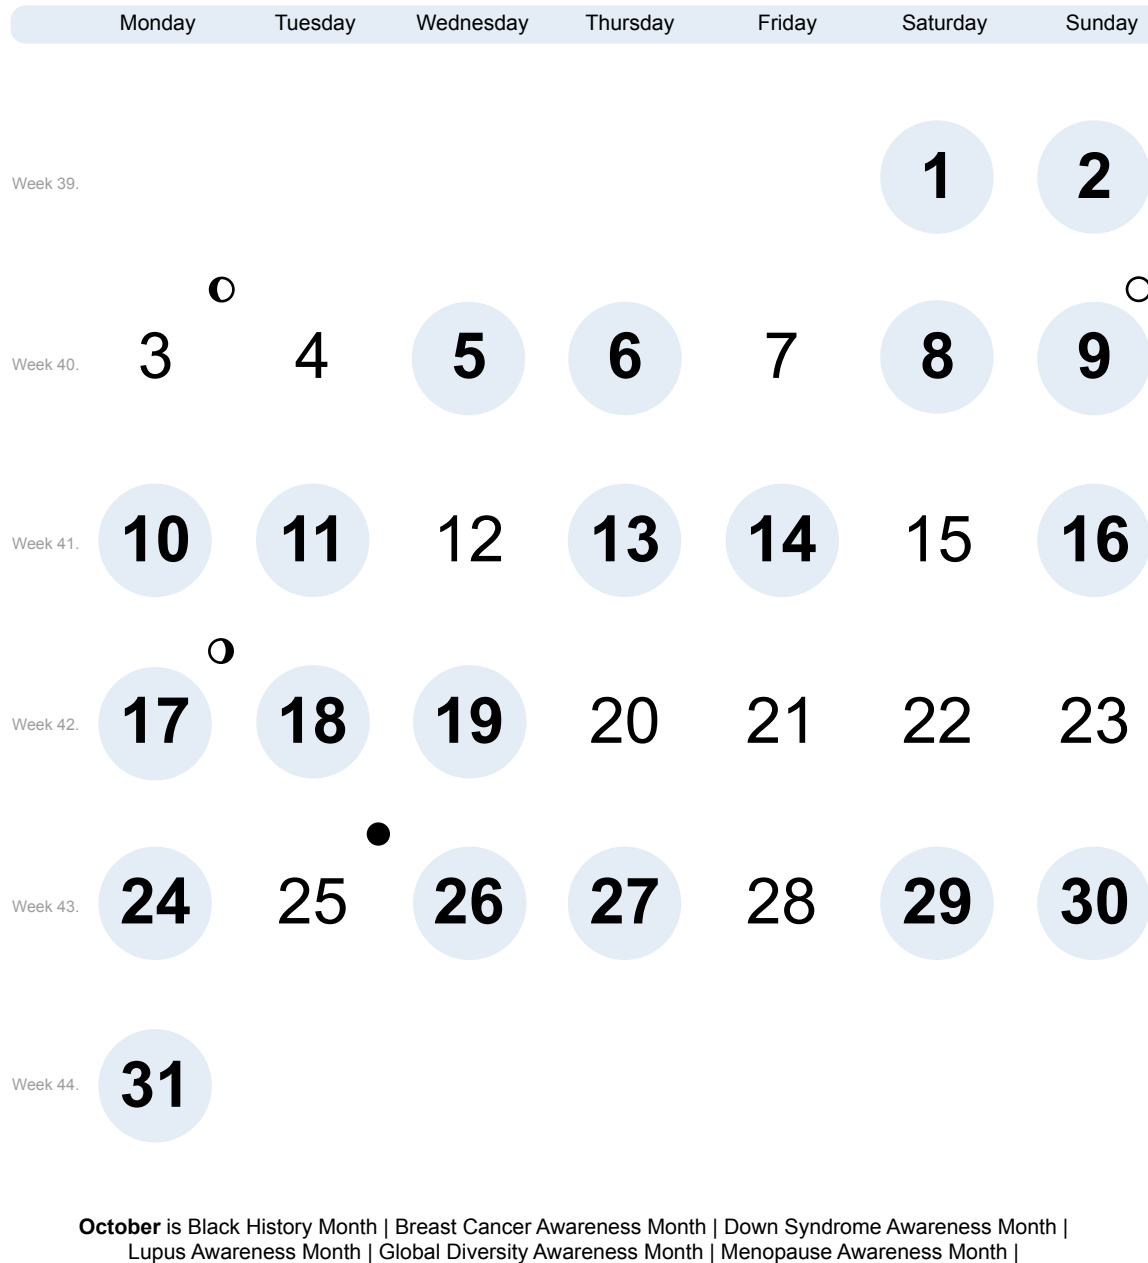

October is Black History Month.

At Archives & Special Collections, we have been examining the role of metadata in our anti-racism, inclusion and diversity work.

Our aim is to have descriptions of our collections which aid discovery, are accurate, respectful and inclusive. A pilot project revealed several descriptions to uncover those which include problematic, culturally insensitive, or offensive terminology.

From this, we have developed robust procedures for the revision of our collection descriptions in line with sector best practice. Our systems allow us to fully capture, and be transparent, about those changes which make our descriptions more inclusive.

An example of our work is in the revision of the content description for the Relazione del Viaggio da Malta alle Spagne nel Anno 1701. Our previous description included a racially insensitive term; this has been removed from the main content description. However, to be transparent, the original description has been retained, with a content warning for the offensive terminology.

November 2022

17 November is International Students' Day.

The University of Glasgow Diversity History and the University of Glasgow International Story seek to make more visible the achievements, experiences, and voices of overseas students, such as this group of 1930s students and Ada Priscilla Nzimiro, MB Chb, who studied in Glasgow.

Ada Priscilla, from Nigeria, enrolled at the University of Glasgow in 1945 to study Medicine. She was active in the African Students' Union, becoming the first woman to be an office-holder and society President. She completed her studies and would have been the first female African graduate of Medicine but sadly passed away, at the age of 27, a few months before her graduation.

The experience of overseas students like Ada Priscilla, living in and studying in Glasgow and their legacies remain topics for further research. The little-known information about Ada Priscilla and other international students, raises the question of whose accomplishments are valued, remembered, and celebrated.

Access to our collections and venues is at the heart of the work of The Hunterian and Archives & Special Collections. This encompasses full and inclusive access to the documents, artworks and objects we look after and display.

In a recent student placement, a team of sighted History of Art students created a set of audio descriptions of artworks and objects. These are intended to offer a new perspective to all and to be particularly useful to visually impaired visitors.

One of the works that has been described is a real treasure of the collections, on display in the Hunterian Art Gallery: Rembrandt van Rijn's The Entombment.

* This church is also famous for being the place wherein the witches and warlocks used to hold their infernal meetings, or sabbaths, and prepare their magical unctions: here too they used to amuse themselves with dancing to the pipes of the muckle-horned Deel. Diverse stories of these horrid rites are still current; one of which my worthy friend Mr. Burns has here favoured me with in verse.

TAM O' SHANTER. A TALE.

WHEN chapmen billies leave the street,
 And drouthy neebors, neebors meet,
 As market-days are wearing late,
 And folk begin to tak the gate;
 While we fit bowing at the nappy,
 And gettin fou, and unco happy,
 We think na on the long Scots miles,
 The waters, mosses, flaps and styles,
 That lie between us and our hame,
 Where fits our sulky, fullen dame,
 Or where we may like gathering storm,

Ah, gentle dames! it gars me greet,
 To think how many counsels sweet,
 How many lengthen'd sage advices,
 The husband frae the wife despises!
 But to our tale:—Ae market-night,
 Tam had got planted unco right,
 Fast by an ingle bleezing finely,
 Wi' reamin fwats that drank divinely;
 And at his elbow, fouter Johnie,
 His ancient, trusty, drouthy cronic;
 Tam lo'ed him like a vera brither,
 They had been fou for weeks together.—

January 2023

25 January is Burns night.

Burns night is when people across the globe celebrate the birth of Scotland's National Bard.

The University of Glasgow's Centre for Robert Burns Studies (CRBS) researches Robert Burns, his contemporaries and related periods.

Together with new immersive learning platform, Edify, Dr Pauline Mackay and CRBS have created a Virtual Reality (VR) classroom that enables learners to experience the origins and legacy of Burns's famous poem 'Tam o' Shanter' and access material culture from Scotland's rich national collections like never before.

The environment was created with close reference to this special volume of Francis Grose's Antiquities of Scotland (1791) from the University of Glasgow's Archives & Special Collections.

Using Edify's VR-by-Proxy functionality, CRBS and Archives & Special Collections provided access to materials that were otherwise out of reach, enabling people to 'learn without limits'.

GAY SOCIETY

HOMOSEXUAL. The word had best come right at the beginning, even though it makes some people, as well as some homosexuals, flinch (people and homosexuals being, as is well known, mutually exclusive classes of things). Glasgow University Gay Society, which comes into being with this new academic year, is dedicated to the proposition that neither in the label "homosexual" nor in what it stands for is there anything to be particularly, or even generally, ashamed of.

The idea of Gaysoc was floated in the Guardian last April, after the SRC voted unanimously to "enable" the formation of a university society, but it was felt that homosexuals themselves might be shy of setting the ball rolling. Names of interested people were invited in the summer, and now Gaysoc emerges.

If we were to say that our aims were to secure the right to special emphasis on "little children" to initiate a campaign for the destruction of family life as normally conceived and as conceived by Mrs Whitehouse; and generally to work for the overthrow of everything held dear by decent, honest, kindly Crossroads watchers; then this would probably tally with what we would expect of us. Alas, our ambitions are a little modest.

We want, first, to establish a social life for the average heterosexual, whose eyes are not dimmed with a member of the opposite sex. The chapter of Love Story, probably the most restricted of opportunities, especially for other homosexuals, especially those who are not to wear wristbands, is highly unlikely ever to be well catered for. She went to the loitered corners of the well-complicated gay world where we were a

Beyond this, we shall work to make it possible for targets here are not spectacular — there is (we trust) no regulation barring homosexuals from membership of GU — but there are enough smaller, relatively informal oppressions of homosexuals. Often, it will be attitudes rather than rules that need to be challenged. Why shouldn't a man turn up with a man, and a girl with a girl, to "partners only" functions? Can a student or lawyer be justifiably confident that his or her career prospects won't be blasted if it becomes known in his or her department that he or she is gay? Heterosexual couples walk around the university holding hands and suchlike difficulties will sometimes please this in excuse for poor academic work ("When I refused to give him up, my parents turned me out, and I just haven't been able to get down to any work"). How many gays would feel easy about pleading the same to the professor in mitigation of a lousy exam result? Can a gay woman lecturer be justifiably confident that she won't suffer the indignity of its being regarded as "undesirable" by her superiors that she should tutor girl students? And it would be nice, too, if "poof" were not the wittiest word in the repertoire of abuse.

A first comment on this catalogue of burdens might be, that sometimes the blame lies more outside GU than in it. It is, for instance, the education authorities that need to be tackled on the issue of gays as teachers. This is undoubtedly true. But, in the first place, there is still plenty of work for us to do within GU, testified by the considerable number of Gaysoc posters around university that have been torn down or disfigured in the second place, a flourishing Gaysoc with a good base and discrimination within the university is likely to encounter in the hostility and discrimination in the university parish.

A second comment, by way of examples, is that the minds of homosexuals are subject to the same the when in his indisputably in our posters, that get and in with each other, and in the poofs" scare in the Moreover, if gays do suffer from a pertinent to ask how those of plausible answer is, that they society around them.

February 2023

February marks LGBTQ+ History Month.

The Hunterian and the Archives & Special Collections teams are working with staff and students from across the University to explore the collections through an LGBTQ+ lens.

Following on from its launch during the 2022 celebrations, LGBTQ+ Fabric of the University continues as a series of informal monthly gatherings to make space for the University community to be creative and to reflect on LGBTQ+ life past and present.

The aim is to create digital resources, plan events and consider new, more inclusive ways of collecting.

Want to get involved? Discover the LGBTQ+ Collections group, join the mailing list, or better yet, drop in to the final monthly gathering to share stories and weave more LGBTQ+ stories into the University Collections.

March

8 March is International Women's Day.

While barred from study and teaching roles at the University until 1892, women have been part of the University's story for centuries. Two recent projects have shown how our collections can help bring to light new stories of the achievements of women in all spheres.

In 2019, archival research supported the Women in Law project to celebrate the achievements of early pioneering women in law and in particular the centenary of the graduation of lawyer Madge Easton Anderson. This project continues to tell the stories of women who changed the legal world.

Mary Queen of Scots was among the University's early benefactors in 1563. The research project In my End is my Beginning, mapped the presence of Mary Queen of Scots items in Scottish heritage collections. This established that the University owns one of the most significant collections in Scotland. This project culminated in a major exhibition at The Hunterian exploring the legend of Mary Queen of Scots and her cultural afterlife.

April 2023

22 April is Earth Day.

Human activity is changing our environment faster than at any time in recorded history; profoundly affecting biodiversity and human and animal health.

The University, in partnership with Glasgow City Council, are working on a £10.2 million research programme: GALLANT - Glasgow as a Living Lab Accelerating Novel Transformation. Funded by the Natural Environment Research Council as part of their Changing the Environment investment, the University is enlisting the help of local partners, communities and other researchers from across the city to move towards climate resilience, whilst tackling health, social and economic inequalities.

The Hunterian's zoological expertise, connections, collections, and long-term lens on wildlife in the city, will have a vital role in achieving GALLANT's goals. In particular, halting biodiversity loss, restoring and connecting green spaces across Glasgow, for the benefit of all of its human and non-human residents.

May 2023

May sees Scottish Mental Health Awareness Week.

Finding time and space to take a break, relieve stress and look after your mental wellbeing is not always easy.

A moment of calm reflection, an opportunity to connect with nature, art or with each other, can be one way to look after yourself.

Take some time out to experience The Hunterian's collections in person in the Hunterian Art Gallery. If you can't make it into the Gallery, you can still explore the collections and virtual exhibitions online.

Duncan Shanks is one of Scotland's greatest living landscape artists. He started filling sketchbooks in the 1960s and the majority were used outdoors and focus on landscape. For him, the physicality of the act of drawing in nature is paramount, as it allows him to be part of nature and to experience it directly. Immerse yourself in Duncan's sketch books.

June 2023

20 June is World Refugee Day.

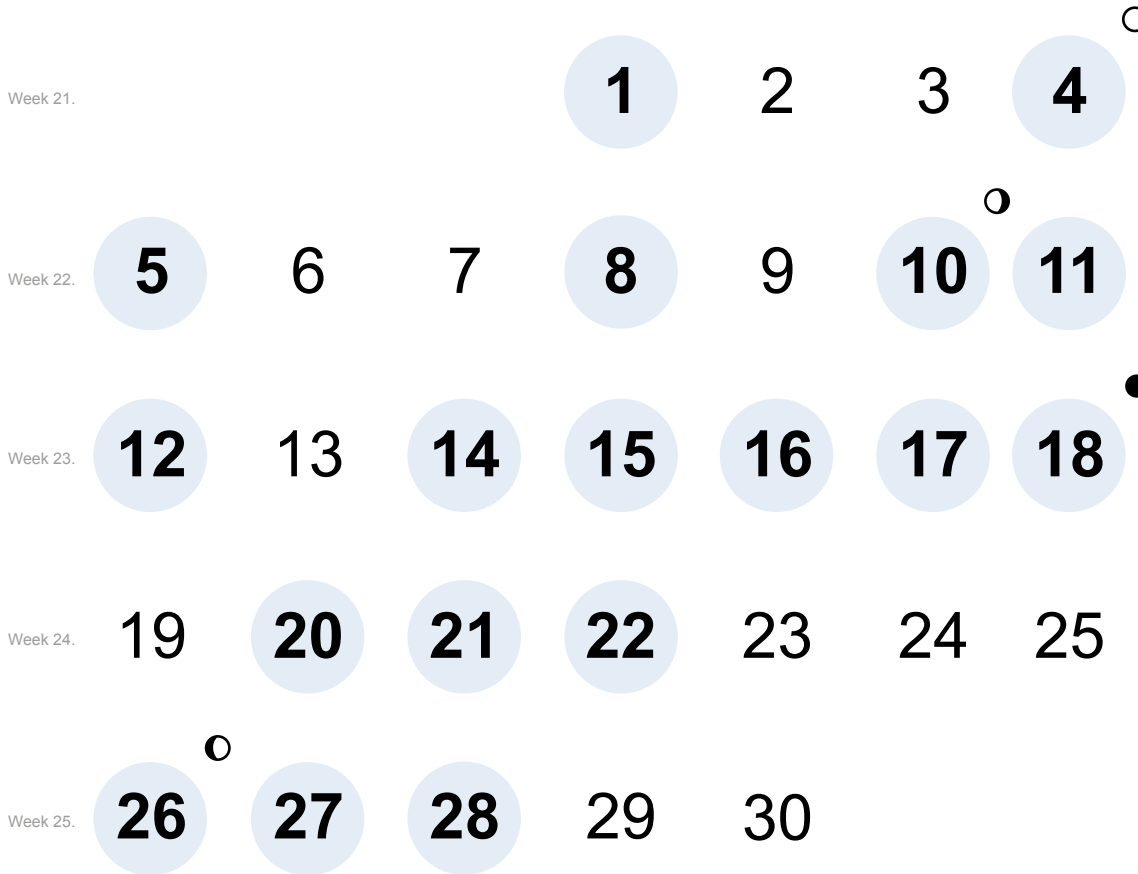

The Hunterian and Archives & Special Collections at the University of Glasgow host an impressive and varied selection of objects created by Polish artists throughout the centuries.

As part of a University research project to provide a resource for those interested in looking at teaching and discussing the topic of migration, Hunterian Associate Dobrochna Futuro created an online exhibition showcasing several hidden treasures from Polish artists, highlighting their artworks in Scotland.

Some of the artists were born in Poland and displaced by World War II. The journey of both artists and artworks reflect the movement and the settlement of people in Scotland. The project notes the complexity of migration, the arbitrariness of marking people or artworks as Polish, Scottish, British, Russian or Ukrainian.

July 2023

July is South Asian Heritage Month.

Stories of South Asian heritage and culture, and of Scotland's links with the region can be found across Archives & Special Collections; in our Scottish Business Archive, photographic, rare books and manuscript collections.

The University Archive records the academic achievements of the many people who travelled to Scotland to study in Glasgow. Among them are the stories of Gopaul Chunder Roy, from Kolkata, and Merbai Ardesir Vakil, from Mumbai. They were, respectively, the first South Asian man and woman to graduate from the University when they received their medical degrees in 1871 and 1897.

We know both Roy and Vakil returned to India to practice medicine. Their stories reveal some of the early connections between the University's first South Asian graduates and the impact of their subsequent achievements.

Many other stories remain incomplete, some untold, but our collections have the potential to be explored and help celebrate South Asian heritage and the links with Scotland.
