Parental Guidance Recommended Users Interact, Shares Info, Shares Location VI've loved this game, but I am becoming to get bored of it. I'd like it to add things, like more items. Sometimes, it's frustrating when you just can't find an item in 10 minutes. I, for one, have 444 items. Constantly, I don't know what to make because of so many things. I just put it one, by one. For an example, Air is the first. So, I do Air, and put every single item on top of it to see if it mix's with anything. And then I do it over, and over. There is cheats, but that takes the fun out of the game. I like the video hint; but, I think it should be, for an example. After you've watched a video, the hint saying. ":!" Normally, with pros, you merge every single item together just to get that one item. If you have the "Water+?" and the water of the hint saying. ":!" It's an update of the original Little Alchemy game with more items, new art, and more. Players start with four basic "elements" -- air, earth, fire, and water -- on the right side of the screen. They can then drag and drop these elements to the workspace on the left, combining and recombining to create new elements such as puddles, energy, the planet, lizards, love, humans, zombies, robots, and farmers. There are 720 elements in its branch, each time an element gets created, it gets added to the column on the right and can be used in new combinations. Students can use the encyclopedia to keep track of elements they have unlocked, reread the flavor text, see the combinations that create each element, and browse by element category. The concept might sound simplistic, but it's a highly addictive experience. It's easy to lose minutes or hours figuring out new combinations and discovering new elements. At first, students will make new connections very quickly, as most early elements combine with each other (and themselves) to make new ones. But soon only some elements are things from real life, but some are fantastical, such as zombies, dragons, and centaurs. There's generally a logical, if not always scientific, reason for the results of combined before, the game briefly shows them what the result was. Once you've combined an item in all of its possible pairings, it becomes depleted and is removed from the available library. It is still accessible in the encyclopedia, however. As students play, they'll reach invisible goals that unlock new basic materials, such as metal, which can then mix with many existing elements. For example, mixing metal with a duck creates an airplane. There are also elements that aren't things at all, such as "big" and "time" and "motion." Additionally, sometimes combining two humans to make both love and a family. Little Alchemy 2 is an intuitive crafting game. Start by combining Earth, air, fire, and water to produce new elements. Think logically about the items you combine. Discover over 700 items and unlock the recipes to time, matter, and the Universe. To play Little Alchemy 2, simply drag items you want to combine from the menu on the right into the middle screen. Then drag one object onto the other to try and combine them both. A valid combination rewards you with new items and provides the recipe in the encyclopedia. You can use the encyclopedia to track your progress and read about the items you've discovered. Being an alchemist will start to get messy, thankfully there's also a "clean up" button located in the top left to clear your canvas. The search feature in the top right is also handy when you're losing track of your creations! Alchemy Combinations Recloak is constantly updating Little Alchemy 2 with new items to craft. There are currently over 700. Some combinations rely on logic and others that require more creative, out-of-the-box thinking. Here are some basic creations so you understand how Little Alchemy works: Fire + Mist = Air Earth + Air = Dust Earth + Fire = Lava Earth + Lava = Volcano Fire + Stone = Metal These are all logical combinations. However, some combos don't seem as obvious, like water + horse creating a hippo. Sometimes you have to think outside the box and mix elements you wouldn't expect to create anything. You need to collect 100 items to unlock time. There is no way to craft time. What is the recipe for life in Little Alchemy 2? There are many ways to create life. Combining electricity with a lake, ocean, sea, or primordial soup is one way. Where can I find all the Little Alchemy 2 combinations? You can click hints in-game if you're stuck. Or head over the official Little Alchemy hints page. Little Alchemy 2 is an interesting science game. A few initial items such as air, fire, soil and water are offered. You must combine these items to create new materials and natural ingredients. To create objects, you must click and drag two objects to the blending screen. If items can be combined, the new material will appear. If you want to remove the materials from the board, simply press the clear button in the top left corner. To keep track of your progress, there is an encyclopedia that lists each combination of objects that you discovered when you discovered them. The encyclopedia also shows your overall progress. Little Alchemy 2 is a great game with excellent playability. You will understand our natural world better and have fun in this process. Game controls: MOUSEPlay Cool Games
