Introduction

Here is a past simple game to help students practice forming past simple affirmative sentences.

Procedure

Divide the students into groups of four.

Explain that the students are going to practice making true past simple affirmative sentences about themselves.

Give each group a set of time expression cards and verb cards. Have the students shuffle the two sets separately.

Tell the groups to put the time expression cards face down in a pile on the desk and deal out the verb cards equally. Each player should have six verb cards.

Players take it in turns to turn over a time expression card from the pile and then make a true past simple affirmative sentence using one of the verbs on their cards and the time expression.

If the player constructs a believable past simple sentence, which is agreed on by the other students to be true, the player may discard the verb card.

If the other students think the sentence can't be true, they challenge the player, and he or she has to keep the verb card.

Students can also challenge the player if the sentence is grammatically incorrect or the wrong verb form is used, in which case the player also has to keep the card.

The aim of the game is to be the first player to get rid of all their verb cards.

If all the time expression cards get used up, they can be turned over and used again.

The game is quite easy at first because there is a choice of verbs, but it becomes more challenging to make a meaningful sentence as the game progresses.
