Protestant Nobility (Aristocratic families) of France of the 16th, 17th, 18th centuries

For many years, historians, scholars, authors in France and in other countries of Europe have played down the role played by the elite Protestant families of France from the 16th to the 18th centuries. In many regions of France, Protestant seigneurs contributed to a stable and growing economy of their regions or ancient provinces of France. Unfortunately due to persecutions of Protestant families in France, many of these Protestant seigneurs simply left their native France and re-settled in many countries of the world.

The following pages are organized according to the ancient regions or provinces of France (the period prior to the French Revolution 1789-1799). I have reproduced URL addresses of online books and societies that address in part who were these Protestant seigneurs during the Old Regime of France.

Most of these texts are in the French language. They are superb works addressing the aristocratic families of France, both Catholics and Protestants.

But I did not forget the working class of France during these periods of time of the Old Regime. At the conclusion of each section, I have reproduced URL addresses of the most common family names within a particular département (modern-day state of France) and within an ancient province of France.

Researching Protestant families (Huguenots, Calvinists, members of the Église réformée de France) of France prior to the French Revolution is highly difficult or in some cases nearly impossible. The reasons are multiple, the primary reason being that many, if not most, Protestant Temples of France under the Old Regime were demolished and church registers, including acts of baptism and marriage, were destroyed by fire.

But you are willing to scrutinize in detail the content of the many URL addresses reproduced in the following pages and take the proper steps in order to solve the French language issue, you can find traces of your Huguenot ancestors.

You might not find an actual act of baptism or marriage, but if you are persistent, you may at least succeed in locating your family name in a commune of France.

One final suggestion: your current family name might not have the same spelling in the 16th, 17th, 18th centuries of France. A number of online family names search engines (Patronymes) in France will suggest alternatives to the spelling of your present time family name.

As they say in France among family lineage researchers: Bonne recherche or Bonne lecture

Strasbourg, being its capital, was located across the German border state of Baden to the east, Lorraine to the west, Franche-Comté to the south, some 500 km east of Paris. Ancient Alsace was divided into Upper Alsace and Lower Alsace – (a) The Upper Alsace was formed by uniting various regions of the Plains of Colmar, located north of Colmar, including Elsgaw (Delle), the ancient land of Huningue, the old counties of Ill, Sundgau, the latter also known as Belfort or Altkirch or Ferrette, plus the ancient districts and dukedoms of Kembs, Raffach and Ferrette, the valleys of Moutiers (Delemont), and Ober-Mundat, the latter located in today's Colmar – (b) The Lower Alsace, included then the regions and villages of Nordgau, Hagueneu, Hatten, Thure, the city of Bischeim (Strasbourg), the ancient duchies of Kirchheim, Lutzelstein (Petite-Pierre), Wasgau also known then as Wissembourg- Alsace was divided at a later time period into two départements (regions) Lower-Rhine and Upper-Rhine, the latter was subsequently divided with one portion assigned to Germany, only the Territory of Belfort, remained with France. Alsace was formed in 870 as a province of Germany – In 1354, the city of Strasbourg would become a free entity – During the war of 1618-1648, known as the War of 30 Years, the region of Habsbourg was allocated to France – 1681, the region of Strasbourg would join France – 1871 – Germany would take over most of Alsace and a large portion of Lorraine with the exception of the territory of Belfort – 1918, Alsace would be allocated once more to France.

>> Angoumois (Comté d'Angoulême) #16 Charente / #24 Dordogne - Angouleme, being its capital, was located south of Poitou, east of Saintonge, north of Périgord, west of Marche and Limousin, some 450 km southwest of Paris. Ancient Angoumois was the birthplace of the département of Charente and a small portion of the Dordogne. The region also known as Angouleme was united to the French Crown in 1308. For the next two hundred years various regional principalities took control of the region. In 1515, the region was reunited once more and on a permanent basis to France.

>> Artois #62 Pas de Calais & #59 Nord -

Arras, being its capital, was located west of Flandre, north of Picardie, with its western region facing the North Atlantic, some 170 km north of Paris. The ancient land was formed in the 12th century, a region which was previously part of Flandre (Flanders). In 1223 the Crown of France would grant the region the title of French Domain. Over the next 450 years, regional principalities would challenge the various French Kings as to the ownership of the ancient province. Finally in 1678, the region was granted to France – Artois was unfortunately one of the major battlegrounds during World War One with such towns as Vimy, Souchez, Lorette and others. – The ancient province of Artois is now known as Pas-de-Calais, the latter was formed by regrouping the old dukedoms, counties and territories of Arras, Angles (Audruicq), Bourgeonval, Couture (Bertincourt), Enclaves d'Artois (Montreuil), Escrebien (Lens), Flavermont (Saint-Pol-sur-Ternoise), Saint-Pol, Arrouaise (Artois & Picardie), Carembault (Flandres & Artois)

>> Aunis #17 Charente-Maritime -

La Rochelle, being its capital, was located south of Poitou, west of Saintonge, north of Guyenne and its western region facing the Atlantic, some 450 km west of Paris. The ancient kingdom was united to France in 1271. From 1360 to 1371, England would occupy the region. The region would become the center of Protestantism in Western France, among the latter the Calvinism and Huguenot movements would flourish in the region, especially around the capital city of La Rochelle. From the late 1500's to 1763, more than 319 different Huguenot families would move to New France, most of them would use the port of La Rochelle as the departure point for America. The Calvinist movement of Western France to New France appears to be much smaller in number. The ancient provinces of Aunis and Saintonge, the latter with its capital Saintes, were united prior to the French Revolution into one entity with one regional government. The Aunis province was subdivided into two distinct regions: (a) Aunis (La Rochelle) and, (b) Petite Flandre (Lesser Flanders) of the département (region) of Charente, north of Rochefort. – The Saintonge province was divided into two lesser regions; (c) Saintonge Méridionale (Southern Saintonge) with its capital of Saintes and; (d) Saintonge Septentrionale (Northern Saintonge) with its capital of St-Jean-d'Angely, the latter a region which included the towns, dukedoms, territories of Brouagais, Archiazes (Archias), Ile (Arvert).- These two provinces would be united into one entity of Charente-Inférieure or also named Charente-Maritime.

>> Auvergne #63 Puy-de-Dome / #15 Cantal -

Clermont-Ferrand, being its capital, was located south of Bourbonnais, west of Lyonnais, north of Languedoc and Guyenne, east of Limousin and Marche, some 400 km south of Paris. The ancient land was realigned during the 14th century (1360) into a single dukedom. In 1527, the region would be annexed to France. The region is part and parcel of a district by the name of Massif Central, a massive plateau overlooking the Sioule Valley to the south; the Dordogne Supérieure to the west; and the regions of Livradois and Forez to the east. The region is part of the mountainous chains of des Puys, Doré and Cantal. The region was divided prior to the French Revolution into two administrative districts; (a) Lower Auvergne which encompassed (a) Lower Auvergne (Clermont-Ferrand); (b) Combrailles (Évaux); (c) Dauphiné d’Auvergne; (d) Franc-Allieu (Marche); (e) Limagne (Billom); (f) Livradois (Ambert). Upper Auvergne included the districts of; (g) Haute Auvergne (Aurillac); (h) Artense (Champs-sur-Tarentaine); (i) Planèze (St-Four), (j) a small portion of Xaintrie (Pléaux) and, (k) Carlades (Vic-sur-Cère) – The Auvergne province was subdivided into two distinct regions (départements) in today’s France; Puy-de-Dome & Cantal

>> Bretagne #35 Ille et Villaine / #44 Loire Atlantique / #22 Côtes d'Armor / #56 Morbihan / #29 Finistère) -

Rennes, being its capital, was located along the Atlantic, west of Normandie, Maine and Ajou, north of Poitou, some 350 km east of Paris. The ancient kingdom traces its origin to the 5th century, at which time the Bretons from the Isle of Britain would have migrated in considerable numbers. In 845, the local residents would defeat an army led Charles de Chauve, thus creating an independent Bretagne. In 938, the Normands would be defeated by the Bretons, from which the kingdom of Bretagne was established. In 1532. Bretagne would join the ranks of provinces of France. The pre-French Revolution Bretagne was subdivided into two distinct regions; Haute-Bretagne (Upper Bretagne) which included the territories of; (a) Rennes; (b) Saint-Brieuc; (c) Alet (Saint-Malo) (d); Doi; (e) Retz or Rai (Nantes); (f) Cogles (Fougères); (g) Nonais (Chateau-Neuf en Bretagne); (h) Plelo (Chatelaudren); (i) Retz or Rai (Paimboeuf); Basse-Bretagne (Lower Bretagne) which included the territories of; (j) Cornouailles (Quimper-Corentin); (k) Coislin; (l) Grève (Saint-Michel-en-Grève); (m) Rhuys (Sarzeau); (n) Vannes; (15) Léonnais; (o) Ack (Brest); (p) Léon; (q) Trèquier. In modern day France, the ancient and colorful Bretagne was regrouped into 5 départements; Ille-et-Villaine - Loire-Inférieure (Loire-Atlantique) - Côte-du-Nord (Côte d'Armor) - Morbihan; & Finistère

>> Cévennes #48 Lozère -

Mende, being its capital - This ancient territory is located east of the Massif Central between the regions of Hérault and Ardèche. This region near Mount Lozère is located some 800 km south west of Paris. The steep mountains and deep valleys are primarily settled by small ranchers and by small-farm owners. The region is lightly populated due to its mountainous contours and extreme dry periods during the summer months. The region was at one time a center of the Protestantism movement in France, also known as the Huguenots. From 1681 to 1685, the region was devastated by the Louvois Brigades, a Catholic group formed by the Crown of France under Louis XIV whose mission was the complete annihilation of Protestants in France. The region is today, part of Lozère, a region located south of Ardèche, west of Drôme, north of Aude and east of Aveyron.

>> Comtat Venaissin #84 Vaucluse -

Avignon, being its capital, the ancient city is located north of Provence, south of Dauphiné, east of Languedoc, some 800 km southeast of Paris. This southern land is located in today's Vaucluse on the Rhône river. The region was part and parcel of the lands owned by various Catholic Popes from 1309 to 1791. In 1348, Pope Clément the Sixth would purchase the area and the ownership remained with the Church of Rome until 1791. The territory would become part of France in 1791. The département of Vaucluse is part of the Provence – Alpes – Côte-d'Azur region of south-eastern France.

>> Limousin #19 Corrèze / #87 Haute-Vienne

Limoges, being its capital, an ancient land situated on the northwest portion of the Massif Central. The region is bordered to the north by Marche, to the east by Auvergne, to the south by Guyenne and Périgord, to the west by Angoumois. Its capital is situated at 374 km south of Paris. In ancient times, the region was the cultural and political center of the Anglo-Normand dynasty. In 1607, the old country was annexed to the Crown of France by King Henri the Fourth. The ancient province of Limousin was made-up of 2 regions and 6 counties; Haut-Limousin (Upper Limousin); (a) Dognon (Saint-Léonard); (b) Ligoure; Bas-Limousin (Lower Limousin); (c) Turenne; (d) Uzerche; (e) Xaintrie (Rilhac); (f) Yssandonnais. In modern day France, the ancient Anglo-Normand dynasty of Limousin would contribute to the creation of two départements; Haute-Vienne (Limoges, its capital) – Corrèze (Tulle, its capital).

>> Lorraine #54 Meurthe et Moselle

Nancy, being its capital, it is located west of Alsace along the German border, northeast of Champagne, north of Franche-Comté, at a distance of the capital of Nancy of approximately 300 km east of Paris. The ancient kingdom was first organized into a political and cultural entity in 511, at which time it became part of the Austrasia regime (the ancient Frankish kingdom) with the city of Metz as its capital. In 870, following the signing of the treaty of Meerssen, the kingdom was divided into the Kingdom of Lower Lothair, the latter named after King Lothair the First, the Carolingian Emperor and the Kingdom of Upper Lothair (Lorraine), the latter being the kingdom of Charles le Chauve. In 960 the regions of Metz, Toul and Verdun were annexed to the duchy of Lorraine. In 1552 Charles the Fifth, the latter also known as Charles Quint of France would annex the regions of Metz, Toul and Verdun. In 1766, King of France Louis the Fifteenth would grant the region the status of province. The ancient land of Lorraine was made-up of various dukedoms, among them we find; (a) Lorraine (Nancy); (b) Bar or Barrois (Bar-le-Duc); (c) Metz; (4) Toul; (d) Verdun; (e) Chaumontois (Nancy – Epinal); (f) Amance; (g) Boulay (Metz); (h) Saint-Die; (i) Blamontois; (j) Hesse (Clermont-en-Argonne); (k) Haye (Nancy); (l) Moselle (Épinal–Nancy); (m) Nitois or Nied (Saint-Avold); (n) Toullois; (o) Phalsbourg; (p) Portois (Nancy); (q) Salm; (r) Vaucouleurs; (s) Vaudement; (t) Woevre (Barrois); (u) Scarponnais (Pont-à-Mousson); (v) Vosges. Following the restitution of counties following World War Two, the regions of the Meuse and Meurthe, were regrouped into one département in today's France; Meurthe-et-Moselle (Nancy, its capital).

Rouen, being its capital, a region located on the Atlantic, west of Picardie, east of Bretagne, north of Perche, Maine, Ile de France. Its capital of Rouen is located at a distance of 125 km. northwest of Paris. The ancient kingdom had its known beginning with the conquest by the Frankish – Merovingians Kingdom in around 428. In the 9th century, the region was invaded by the Normans. In 911, the Viking King Rollon would invade the territory. In 1106, Normandie would become French again. In 1420, Britain would conquer the region. In 1436, France would re-establish its ownership. In 1468, King of France Louis the 11th would grant the region the status of province. – The new province would be divided into two regions: Haute-Normandie (Upper Normandie); Basse-Normandie (Lower Normandie). Haute-Normandie was made-up of; (a) Caux; (b) Roumois; (c) Vexin Normand (Gisors); (d) Bray; (e) Ouche; (f) Lieuvin – Basse-Normandie was made-up of; (g) Auge; (h) Caen; (i) Bessin; (j) Cotentin; (k) Avranchin; (l) Bocage Normand; (m) Marches. Normandie in modern day France would be subdivided into 5 départements; Seine-Inférieure or Seine-Maritime (Rouen, its capital) – Eure (Évreux, its capital) – Orne (Alençon, its capital) – Calvados (Caen, its capital)

>> Picardie #80 Somme

Amiens, being its capital, this northern Province is bordered by Flandre and Artois to the north, Champagne to the east, Ile de France to the south and Normandie to the west. Its capital of Amiens is located 132 km north of Paris, it is first mentioned as being a colony of Spain and then conquered by Henry the Fourth in 1597. The province of Picardie is first mentioned as being invaded by Britain in 1185. The region would be annexed on a permanent basis to the Crown of France in 1477. The region was then divided into two districts; Haute-Picardie and Basse-Picardie.- Haute Picardie was made-up of (a) Amienois, (b) Santerre, (c) Vermandois, (d) Thierache. Basse Picardie was made-up of (e) Calais, (f) Boulonnais, (g) Ponthieu, (h) Vimeu. The province of Picardie would form only one département in modern day France: Somme (Amiens, its capital

>> Poitou-Charentes #16 Charente / #17 Charente-Maritime / #86 Vienne / #79 Deux-Sèvres / #85 Vendée

Poitiers, being its capital, this Atlantic region province is bordered by Bretagne to the west, Anjou and Touraine to the north, Berry, Marche to the east, Aunis, Saintonge, Angoumois to its south. Its capital city of Poitiers is located some 329 km southwest of Paris. The highest percentage of pioneers to the new colony of La Nouvelle France (New France) originated from this ancient province. The Duchy of Poitou is mentioned as early as the 9th century, for a brief period the region was under British rule. In 1369 King of France Charles the Fifth would reconquer the region and establish the ancient land as a province of the Crown. It was then divided into Upper Poitou and Lower Poitou. The region of Haut Poitou included (a) Poitou Oriental (Poitiers), Bas Poitou included (b) Fontenay, (c) Gatine (Parthenais), (d) Loudunois, (e) Mirebalais (Mirebeau), (f) Niortais, (g) Thouarsais, (h) Taimondais, (i) Vendée, (j) Bocage Vendéen, (k) Luconnais, (l) Herm – Poitou would form three départements in modern day France; Vienne (Poitiers, its capital) - Deux-Sèvres (Niort, its capital) – Vendée (La Roche-sur-Yon, its capital)

Aix, being its capital, this southern province is bordered by the Mediterranean Sea to its south; Dauphiné and Comtat Venaissain to its north; Languedoc to its west. Its capital city of Aix is first mentioned in the 6th century BC, as being a Greek Province. The Romans would conquer the region in the 2nd century BC. In 1481 it was annexed to the Crown of France. The region is associated closely with its neighbours, Comtat Venaissain (Avignon); Comté de Nice (Nice). The region was divided into (a) Aix, (b) Callianex, (c) Esterel or Sterel, (d) Frejus, (e) Castellane, (f) Digne, (g) Forcalquier, (h) Aries, (i) Apt, (j) Albion or Bion, (k) Grignan, (l) Camarque, (m) Crau. The ancient kingdom was divided into 3 départements in modern day France: Basses-Alpes or Alpes-de-Haute-Provence (Digne, its capital) - Var (Toulon, its capital) - Bouches du Rhône (Marseille, its capital).

>> Saintonge #17 Charente-Maritime -

Saintes, being its capital was located on the Western portion of France, slightly southeast of the ancient province of Aunis (La Rochelle) to the west, Poitou to the north, Angoumois to the east and Guyenne to the south. Its capital of Saintes is located at a distance of 450 km west of Paris. The region was annexed to France in 1375 by King of France Charles the Fifth. As early as 1604, the city of La Rochelle would become the departure point of thousands of pioneers bound for Acadia and New France. La Rochelle was also during the same time-frame, the port of international commerce with the Americas. The ancient provinces of Saintonge and Aunis were united prior to the French Revolution into one entity with one regional government. The Aunis province was subdivided into two distinct regions; (a) Aunis (La Rochelle) and, (b) Petite Flandre (Lesser Flanders) of the département (region) of Charente, north of Rochefort. – The Saintonge province was divided into two lesser regions; (c) Saintonge Méridionale (Southern Saintonge) with its capital of Saintes and; (d) Saintonge Septentrionale (Northern Saintonge) with its capital of St-Jean-d'Angely, the latter a region which included the towns, dukedoms, territories of Brouagais, Archiazes (Archias), Ile (Arvert) – These two provinces would be united into one entity of Charente-Inférieure or also named Charente-Maritime (La Rochelle, its capital).

>> Savoie #73 Savoie / #74 Haute Savoie -

Chambery, being its capital, this region of Central Eastern France is bordered to the west by Iserre; Ain and Jura to its west; the Alpes region to its south and Italy and Switzerland to its east. Its capital of Chambery is located at a distance of 524 km southeast of Paris. The region is first mentioned about 122 BC at which time the region was invaded by the armies of the Roman Empire. During the 9th and 10th centuries, the region would become part of the Kingdom of Bourgogne. In 1792 this ancient kingdom was annexed to France. The region was then divided as per its distinct ancestral counties; (a) Chablais (Thonon), (b) Genevois (Annecy), (c) Savoie, (d) Faucigny (Bonneville), (e) Tarentaine (Moutiers), (f) Maurienne (Saint-Jean-de-Maurienne), (g) portion of Gugey, east of the Rhone. In modern-day France the region is now known as Savoie (Chambery, its capital) - Haute-Savoie (Annecy, its capital).
