

D3/D2/NAIA Schools with Engineering

This list is not meant to be an official list and is definitely missing many schools. This is just meant to be a starting point to show that majoring in Engineering and playing non-D1 sports is an option. Colleges change the majors they offer often, so this list is definitely not 100% accurate. If you know other schools that offer Engineering programs please e-mail us at info@studentathleteworld.com and we can add to the list. All school below are D3 unless listed as D2 or NAIA.

Alfred
CalTech
Carnegie Mellon
Case Western Reserve
Catholic
Claremont-Mudd-Scripps
Clarkson
Elizabethtown
Farleigh-Dickson
Illinois Institute of Technology
John Hopkins
LaRoche
LeTourneau
Lynchburg
Merimack (D2)
Messiah
MIT
MSOE
Norwich
NYIT (D2)
NYU/Polytechnic
Ohio Northern
Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute (RPI)
Rochester Institute of Technology
Roger Williams
Rose Hulman
Rowan
Scranton
Stevens Institute of Technology
Swarthmore
TCNJ

Trine
Trinity
Tufts
Umass-Dartmouth
Union
Union College
University of Rochester
University of Texas - Dallas
USMMA
Washington University in St. Louis
Wentworth
Wentworth Institute
Western New England
Widener
WPI
York College

3+2 or 4+1 Transfer Options

Many schools also offer 3+2 or 4+1 engineering program where a student studies a related subject (Math, Physics, Biology) and then transfers to a partner school after 3 or 4 years and completes the degree from the accredited Engineering program at a larger (usually D1 sports) institution. This can be a good option to play athletics at a D3 school and graduate from a large Engineering program.

Bowdoin (with Dartmouth)
Connecticut College (with Dartmouth)
Dickinson
Goucher (with Hopkins)
Haverford (with CalTech)
Muhlenberg
Oberlin
Salisbury
St. Mary's MD (with Maryland)
St. Vincent (with Penn State, UPitt or Catholic)
Trinity (with Dartmouth)
Wesleyan (with Dartmouth)