

RESIDENT OR PERMANENT RESIDENT

RESIDENT OR PERMANENT RESIDENT DEBATE

Do we need to change our residency certificates?

We have had numerous questions and discussions as to whether or not the green A4 resident certificate/registration certificates without an expiry date should be renewed. Our response has been that.

1. To those members who were asked by health centres for a renewal of the certificate suggesting that the valid version had expired after five years. This not the case. The document does not expire.
2. It is not obligatory to change the registration card for a version with the inscription 'residencia con caracter permanente'. It may be convenient to do so.
3. That these certificates DO NOT expire and furthermore, after five years of legal residence, you are by law a permanent resident
4. Those who for expediency wish to exchange the certificate for one stating 'residencia con caracter permanente' have the right to do so and if refused, can make a formal complaint via the link below.
5. We have been advising members who have tried to do obtain the card stating 'permanent residence', that there is no obligation to provide documentation such as healthcare and proof of income or to make a new application for residency status. Our posture on this is also backed up by the European commission in the link provided.
